THE CHICAGO SITUATION

MAN DEAD IN SUBWAY

Body Found Wedged Between Rails, but Cause of Death Is Mystery—May Have Been Dragged by Car.

Mystery surrounds the killing of a man, believed to be A. J. Hudson of Wakefield, found dead on the Elevated Railroad Company's tracks in the subway at Adams square about 1 o'clock this afternoon.

The man was about seventy years of age. Papers found in the pockets of the dead man indicated that he was a veteran of the Civil War.

Medical Examiner Magrath was notified about the case, and he went to the scene of the tragedy. He said that he could find no one who could throw any light on how the man came to his death.

WEDGED BETWEEN RAILS.

When the body of the man was discovered it was wedged in between the rail charged with electricity and the steel rail nearest it, about twenty feet north of the north end of the station. The body was cut and bruised.

It is the belief of the police that the man was struck by a train bound for the North station. It is not known whether he was knocked from the station or whether he was walking on the track.

It was suggested by those who investigated the situation that the aged man may have been thrown against the third rail and that he was killed by the electric shock.

The man had gray hair and a gray mustache. On his coat there was a Grand Army badge. It hung from the empty sleeve that dangled from his right shoulder.

WAS WAKEFIELD MAN.

The man wore a black suit and black laced shoes. In a cardcase found in one pocket was a card that bore the name, "A. J. Hudson."

At No. 613 Main street, Wakefield, lived a man who answered the description of the dead man. It was said at the house that word had been received there of the death of the man, and it was reasonably certain that he belonged there.

It was said that Mr. Hudson had not been home last night. He had been employed as a travelling salesman. He lost his wife about a year ago. There are five children.

One of the children is the Rev. D. A. Hudson of Chelmsford. The others are Herbert W. Hudson, who lived at the address given in Wakefield with William M., another son, and Lena and Grace, daughters.

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, Boston, May 23.—It was a sure thing that Cy Morgan, the minstrel, would pitch his arm off to beat the St. Louis Browns this afternoon. Cy has no love for Manager McAleer, who kept him under his thumb for several years without giving the pitcher a fair chance. The minute St. Louis sold Morgan to Boston the minstrel demonstrated his box worth.

Cy was in fine shape for the battle today, and when he started in to work there was determination in every move [illegible] made. To win from the Browns was worth a month's salary to the raw-boned slab artist.

The heavy rain of last night slowed up the base lines, and the speedy men made up their minds not to try for second except when absolutely necessary. The Red Sox have regained some of the confidence they had when the season opened and have been going well since the Browns came to town. They are not making enough runs, however, although in nearly every game lately they have outbatted their opponents. McGuire feels that the team will make a better showing from now on.

The fine finish put up by the Red Sox yesterday set the fans by the ears and there was a big crowd on hand when the sport began this afternoon. Saturdays are hoodoos for the locals, but they felt confident that they could overcome the hard luck to-day.

The Browns remain in town for another game on Monday. Then they give way to the Chicago White Sox, the last of the Western clubs to appear in Boston. Next Friday the Washingtons come here for a series, after which the Red Sox leave for a long Western trip, returning on June 23.

WEST SIDE BASEBALL PARK, Chicago, May 23.—Lindaman was Manager Joe Kelley's choice for Boston in the last game of the series with the Cubs at the West Side Park this afternoon. Manager Chance was undecided at the last moment as to whether he would send Overall or Fraser against the Doves.

A large Saturday crowd was out to see the last clash between the Cubs and Doves. The day was ideal for the game, Summer temperature prevailing, the sky being cloudless and the sun bright.

The last two games between the Doves and Cubs have aroused great interest in the last game. The count now stands two games won for the Chicago team and one victory for Boston. Kelley's men hope to break even in the series.

COLLEGE CREWS MEET IN RACE ON SCHUYLKILL

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—The annual American Henley regatta was held on the Schuylkill this afternoon under splendid water conditions, but the spectators were in constant fear of a drenching. The oarsmen were satisfied, however, as the smooth water held out promises of fast races.

The entry list is the largest on record since the regatta was started, nearly fifty crews being entered. The presence of crews from Yale, Harvard, Georgetown, New York University and Pennsylvania added considerable interest to the events, and there were also the seven schools, representing the best interscholastic rowers in the East, in the race for the American championship.

None of the crews did any work this morning, the oarsmen contenting themselves with a walk around to keep their blood circulating. The coaches visited their respective boathouses and attended to the rigging of the shells, and everything was then in readiness for the first race.

One of the best races of the day was expected to be between the second crews of Yale, Harvard and Pennsylvania. All three were confident of winning, but Coach Kennedy made no attempt to conceal the fact that he looked upon the Yale eight as sure winners.

COUNCILMEN MOURN DEATH OF DOHERTY

Meet in Special Session and Appoint Committee to Attend Funeral Service.

The Common Council met in special session at City Hall this afternoon at call of Mayor Hibbard to take appropriate action upon the death of Councilman Thomas F. Doherty of Ward 2, who died suddenly Thursday night. Councilman Joseph H. Pendergast, one of Mr. Doherty's colleagues from Ward 2, offered resolutions which were adopted by a rising vote.

Remarks eulogistic of Mr. Doherty's character as a citizen and his worth as a public official were made by Councilmen Pendergast, O'Neil, Bagley, Crane, McLennan, Arnold, Costello, Driscoll, Ducey, Webster, Roberts and President McCullough.

The following committee was appointed to represent the Common Council at the funeral, which will be held at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon from the house, No. 163 Webster street, East Boston: Councilmen Thomas M. Joyce, William E. Carney Joseph Santosuosso, John L. Donovan, John L. Costello, Daniel F. Cronin, Edward C. R. Bagley, Frank A. Goodwin, Theodore L. Sorenson, Dennis A. O'Neil, Joseph H. Pendergast, Augustus D. McLennan, Frank B. Crane, Francis M. Ducey and Edward C. Webster.

It was voted that the flag on City Hall be half-masted to-morrow, that the desk of Mr. Doherty in the council chamber be drape dfor thirty days, and that a copy of the resolutions be engrossed and sent to his bereaved family. Upon motion of Councilman John L. Donovan of Ward 7 an order was passed petitioning the Legislature for authority to pay to the widow of Mr. Doherty the balance of his salary for the year 1908.

DISCHARGED BY CITY, WINS SUIT FOR BACK PAY

By Decision of Supreme Court Civil Service Men May Recover Damages.

A decision that foremen and laborers under civil service ratings are entitled to recover damages from the city when discharged for political reasons was handed down by the Supreme Court to-day in the case of Thomas E. Garvey of Lowell, a foreman in the Health Department, who was discharged ostensibly to save expenses but in reality because of refusing to render political services to a member of the Board of Health. He recovers $293 from the city in back wages.

The decision is likely to have a far-reaching effect as numbers of men with civil service rating who have been discharged under the Mayor Hibbard regime, may take action against the city.

Garvey in 1907 was discharged, the board declaring it to be in the interests of economy. The jury which heard his suit to recover wages declared that the discharge was a mere pretext and not in good faith. The city contended that the records of the board which stated the reason as economy were conclusive, hence appealed from the decision, but were overruled by the court.

BROWARD LEADS FOR SENATORSHIP

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 23.—Incomplete returns from the Democratic primary show that Governor Broward's plurality for United States Senator will exceed 2,000. Gilchrist for Governor leads Stockton by 2,500.

DARTMOUTH FAVORITE IN BIG FIELD GAMES

BY DYKE CLARK.

TECH FIELD, Brookline, May 23.—It was more of a Dartmouth field day than anything else when the track races and field events were held to decide the New England college championships as the New Hampshire boys had everything their own way.

The question of the afternoon's sport was the size of Dartmouth's score as it was certain of repeating victories of the past two years and get a good start on that fifteen-year cup which was in its fourth year of competition.

It was an interesting fight for second place with M. I. T., Williams, Bowdoin and Amherst. It was surprising to see such far-off colleges as Bowdoin and University of Maine making such a gallant battle against foes who a few years ago had the field to themselves.

It only went to show that the smaller institutions must be reckoned with in the future with the better facilities they have and competent trainers.

Shaw Was a Star.

The big attractions were the stars who won the biggest number of points, and there were quite a few of them. Captain Shaw of Dartmouth was the big gun of the Hanoverians, as he is the leading college high hurdler to-day, and his ten points in both hurdles were assured before the races were started.

Sherman, the Dartmouth sprinter, was another foremost athlete who had the dashes at his mercy and also was a big figure in the broad jump. Johnny Mayhew of Brown was one of the few Brown men to get points for the Providence college and the stocky fast stepper was seen in the hurdles and broad jump.

Horrax, leader of the Williams team, was the mainstay of the Berkshire College, and was put down to repeat in the high jump over last year, as well as gather something in the hurdles and pole vault.

A hot race was looked for in the quarter-mile, with Blackburn of Tech and Evans, the Dartmouth flyer, arrayed against each other for top honors, and it proved so.

Sensational time was not expected in any of the events, as the grounds were too heavy from the rains to develop any great speed, but the heat of rivalry existing between the colleges and the cheering of the delegations present stimulated the track men to better performances than usual.

DEATH CLOSES PETER DAILEY'S STAGE CAREER

CHICAGO, May 23.—Peterr F. Dailey, widely known as an actorr, died to-day in the Auditorium Annex Hotel. He had been on the stage many years and begun his stage careerr in black face in the days when minstrelsy was much in vogue.

He was a member of the "American Four," a song and dance team which drew a high salary, and appeared in variety theatres all over the country in this quartette.

He got into white-face acts about the time musical comedies became popular. He was long a member of the Weber and Field's Company and after he left tha. Broadway house started in several pieces. His wife died three years ago.

ROCKEFELLER-HARRIMAN WAR LOWER STOCKS

NEW YORK, May 23.—There was a flood of selling orders in the stock market today, four Rockefeller houses throwing over large blocks of Union Pacific and St. Paul and the room filled with stories of rupture between the important holding interests in those companies. Most of this talk was in a nature to indicate differences between Rockefeller and Harriman interests. The decline carried prices down all the way from three to about eight points in the leading issues.

M'QUADE FOR PAUPER BOARD

Mayor Hibbard announced to-day that he would reappoint Thomas A. McQuade of Ward 20 to the board of pauper institutions trustees for a term of five years. Mr. McQuade was originally appointed by Mayor Fitzgerald a year ago for a one year term.

The Mayor to-day approved of bids for 32,500 tons of coal, the bids for which were secured in accordance with the recommendation of the finance commission. The total cost of the coal will be $114,166. By buying the coal in such large quantities it is estimated that the saving to the city will be $24,000.

OSBORNE FIELD, Princeton, N. J., May 23.—The Harvard nine lined up against the Tiger baseball team this afternoon and as is usually the case when the Crimson comes here for athletic trouble there was a big crowd out to see the sport.

Of course, the sentiment was overwhelmingly in favor of the Orange and Black, but not a few Harvard undergraduates made the journey from Cambridge and a delegation of Harvard graduates who reside in New York were also on hand. They all sat together in a section of the grandstand and cheered fervently for Old Harvard.

From noon on there was a constant stream of men and women arriving by train and automobile, so that by 2 o'clock there was a very enthusiastic crowd gathered at Osborne Field. It was the second struggle of the year between Harvard and Princeton, the first game at Cambridge having been won by the Tigers.

The weather was sultry and threatening.

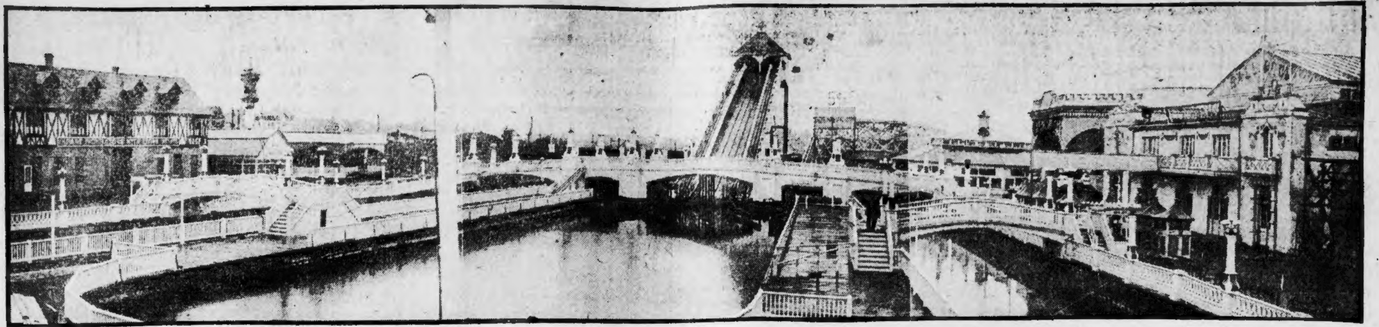
THE NEW WONDERLAND—PANORAMIC VIEW OF THE GREAT REVERE BEACH RESORT AS IT LOOKS TO-DAY



ROOSEVELT BACK OF ANTI-MERGER SUIT

DEBATE MERELY CONCERNED WHERE ACTION SHOULD BE BROUGHT, IT IS ANNOUNCED.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—President Roosevelt issued a statement to-day in which he made it plain that it is the intention of the government to prevent the merging of the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads, and to compel the Mellen cohorts to disgorge the trolley lines that they have already gobbled. The President had no thought of holding up the proceedings, he says.

The President denied that there was a row between himself and Attorney-General Bonaparte over bringing of the action at this time. He said that the discussion at yesterday's meeting of the Cabinet concerned the advisability of launching the suit in Massachusetts rather than in Connecticut.

WHITE HOUSE STATEMENT.

The statement issued at the White House said:

"There was no difference whatever between the President and Attorney-General over the New York & New Haven suit. Yesterday morning attention was called from Massachusetts to the effect that the Massachusetts court had already acted against the trolley line, so far as Massachusetts was concerned, and the suggestion was accordingly made that the action should be brought in one of the other States, inasmuch as the purpose of the suit had already been achieved, so far as Massachusetts was concerned.

"The President put the suggestion before the attorney-general and asked him to bring it up at the cabinet meeting, which was then but half an hour off. As a precautionary measure the newspapers that had the announcement on the bringing of the suit, were asked to hold it up.

"NO FRICTION."

"The matter was then discussed in the cabinet and it was decided that the action of the State Court in Massachusetts would make no difference in the course of procedure by the government and the newspapers were at once notified that the announcement of the bringing of the suit would stand.

"There was no division of opinion in the Cabinet and not the slightest friction or even discussion of any kind between any of the Cabinet officers and the President, or among the Cabinet officers themselves. The suit in question was determined upon some three months ago; the only question discussed yesterday was as to where it should be brought."

NINE MONTHS' WORK PREPARING THE CASE

United States District Attorney French, who yesterday brought suit against the New Haven railroad on the charge of violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, had been considering the subject of bringing suit ever since August 21, 1907.

Mr. French has been giving his almost unremitting attention to this investigation and has taken personal charge of the work and made reports from time to time to the President and the Attorney-General.

These facts are stated in a letter which Mr. French sent to Grenville S. MacFarland, chairman of the executive committee of the Independence League, on the twenty-ninth day of April, in reply to a letter from Mr. MacFarland on behalf of the League.

Mr. French's letter follows:

Department of Justice.
UNITED STATES ATTORNEY'S OFFICE,
District of Massachusetts,
Federal Building,
Boston, April 29, 1908.

Grenville S. Macfarland, Esq.,
Chairman Executive Committee,
Independence League of Massachusetts,
Boston.

My Dear Sir:

I have your letter of April 25, which you preface with the statement that "almost a year ago, on behalf of the State Committee of the Independence League Party," you sent me a communication in which you set forth your understanding of the facts concerning the railroad situation in Massachusetts and the law applicable thereto. Upon consulting my files, I am relieved to find that it is not quite as bad as you suggest. The letter to which you refer is dated August 21, 1907.

Laid Before the Administration.

In your last letter you call my attention to certain testimony of Mr. Mellen given at the legislative hearings last year, which has become a matter of public knowledge, and to certain other statements contained in your original communication, and then cite and quote from decisions of the courts under the Sherman Act which demonstrate to your satisfaction that the New Haven road, by reason of its acquisition of stock in the Boston & Maine road and upon the hypothesis that the latter is "parallel and competing" within the judicial definitions of those words, has violated the act. You close by criticising the delay which you characterize as "great" and "almost inexplicable," and refer to certain rumors concerning the political situation in Connecticut as tending to explain the inaction with which you charge the Department of Justice, although you are kind enough to disavow the belief that I am, "either through fear or favor, personally responsible for any unnecessary delay in this grave and pressing matter."

I beg to remind you that in my reply to your letter of August 21st last, I informed you that this whole situation had then been under advisement by the President and the Department of Justice for some time; that the stenographic report of Mr. Mellen's entire testimony before the legislative committee had been promptly transmitted to the Attorney-General, and that I had been directed by him, some weeks before recieving your letter, to begin, and that I was then making careful inquiry, not only into the facts to which you referred connected with the attempted consolidation of the two railroads, but of the acquisition, direct and indirect, by the New Haven Road, during the past five or six years, of other steam roads, of street railways and of steamship lines engaged in competitory interstate traffic.

An Immense Amount of Work.

I have no doubt that, upon reflection, you will realize, as I believe the public generally does, that this investigation has necessarily involved an immense amount of work, which I have been obliged personally to supervise, and, at the same time, to perform the other duties of my office. As a matter of fact, I have given almost unremitting attention to it, to the neglect of less important things, and have, from time to time, made reports of my progress to the President and the Attorney-General. The gathering of these facts, covering a great variety of transactions and a considerable period of time, has not, however, been the only important or the most delicate task incident to the investigation. The questions of law involved are novel and for the most part unsettled, and it is extremely important, in view of the financial interest in railroad investments in New England of a great number of people, that no step shall be taken hastily and without carefully weighing its justification in law and its consequences to the public. It would be a violation of duty on the part of the administration to proceed against the New Haven road without first being in full possession of all the material facts bearing upon the situation, and without feeling reasonably certain that those facts show something more than a mere technical infringement of the law.

This investigation is one of the most important that has been instituted by the department under the Sherman act, and no one can doubt that to act hastily would be absolutely inexcusable.

In Behalf of the Public.

While it is contrary to my custom to discuss publicly matters under my official observation which are either in process of litigation or may, perhaps, become so, I realize that you have addressed me in behalf of a body of citizens whose interest in the welfare of the community is not to be questioned, and who are entitled to have any reasonable and proper request for information, upon so important a matter as that which is the subject of your letter, complied with.

The Attorney-General, in whom, as you know, full discretion with regard to equitable proceedings under the statute is vested, now has the whole matter under advisement, and will undoubtedly come to such conclusion in the near future as his duty and the interests of the public demand. He will not be hurried, I am sure, by the existence of regrettable and unfounded rumors, such as those to which you refer, nor will he be delayed by any consideration save such as should actuate a high-minded and just public official.

Very respectfully,
ASA P. FRENCH,
United States Attorney.

The full text of Mr. MacFarland's letter to Mr. French, including the testimony given by Mr. Mellen about one year ago, on which the suit is based, will be printed in to-morrow's AMERICAN.

HELD IN $1,000 BAIL FOR BREAK

James McCorry, twenty-five, claiming to live in Union Park street, Boston, had a novel plea to offer when arraigned to-day before Judge Preble in the Charlestown District Police Court upon a charge of breaking and entering the barber shop of Robert Noonan, No. 8 Joiner street, Charlestown.

Patrolman Norton, who found one of the shop windows open, also found McCorry asleep in one of the barber chairs. His pockets were filled with razors, razor strops and soap.

"It was this way," said McCorry to the judge. "I met a man in the street who handed me all that stuff," pointing to the goods found in his possession. "Then he ran away. I knew it had been stolen. Passing that barber shop, I saw the window open and thought it would be a good scheme to climb in and leave the stuff there. Just after getting in I fell asleep."

He was held in $1,000 bonds.

GARDINER HELD IN STOCK THEFT

Hedley J. Gardiner, former auditor of the Royal Bank of Canada, Toronto, now employed by the Eastern Audit Company, arrested by the Providence police yesterday on the charge of larceny of 13,200 shares of Bay State gas stock, was to-day held in $1,500 bonds for the grand jury. He waived examination. Gardiner told the police that he had been drinking heavily and could not remember what had happened. His wife and family are in Montreal.

RECEIVERS LOSE SUIT

Judge Hammond of the Supreme Court has overruled the plaintiff's exceptions to the master's report in the suit brought by Receivers Alfred S. Hall and Charles F. Wood against Sidney M. Hedges and William H. Brigham, directors of the Provident Securities Company, to recover for losses sustained in consequence of the management of its affairs.

Patrick H. Cooney, the master, reported that the losses were not due to negligence or inattention on their part, but rather to errors of judgment, and found that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover.

Mike, the Educated Dog

He is one of the performers in Darling's circus in Wonderland, free tickets to which will be printed in to-morrow's American. Another performer is Buffalo, the bucking pony, whom nobody can ride, but whom somebody TRIES to ride at every performance.

AUTO PATROLS GUARDING CARS IN CLEVELAND

Union Sympathizers Shadowed by Detectives to Prevent Renewed Rioting.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 23.—Heroic measures by the police have apparently stopped rioting and dynamiting by the street car strikers and their sympathizers, and to-day more cars are running than at any time in the seven days of the strike.

All night policemen patrolled the car tracks where schedules were maintained. They were aided by other patrols in automobiles.

Detectives were detailed and followed the union leaders all night long, even watching their hotels after the union men retired.

To-day leaders of both sides are in session trying to agree on a third arbitrator to take the place of G. K. Shurtleff, secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., who declined to serve. The strikers are also voting to-day on the question of the men now employed holding their runs until the arbitrators decide the seniority question.

Vice-President A. L. Behner of the International Union, in charge of the strike, says he believes the strikers will reject the offer.

NEW RULING ON PROBATION

Placing cases on file against defendants without the consent of the defendants is illegal, according to a decision recorded by the full bench of the Supreme Court. The decision comes as the result of the petition of Edwin H. Marks of Somerville against Judge Wentworth of the Somerville Police Court who asks that the judge be compelled to dispose of the case against him of alleged assault and battery upon his wife. The court orders the judge to dispose of the case finally.

Marks was found guilty of the charge by the court, but sentence was suspended, and the probation officer ordered to investigate. Marks appeared twice and demanded that the judge finally dispose of his case.

SUED BY BANK FOR CUBA BONDS

The Knickerbocker Trust Company of New York is suing Preston B. Keith of Campello and Edwin H. Abbott of Cambridge to recover $53,437, and the case is pending in the United States Circuit Court. It is claimed that Keith purchased twenty-five and Abbott fifty of the first mortgage bonds of the Northeastern Cuba Development Co. at $950 each, and that Keith paid $5,937 and Abbott $11,875 on account, guaranteeing the payment of the balance through the Knickerbocker Trust Company. The trust company claims that payment was demanded and refused.

ACCUSE WOMAN OF $2,500 THEFT FROM HER WARD

Arrested in Haverhill and Held for Indictment Warrant From Chicago.

Special to the Boston American.

HAVERHILL, May 23.—After spending the night in a cell at the police station, following her arrest as a fugitive from justice, Mrs. Ella O. Stone of Chicago, who posed here as "the wealthy Mrs. Lucas," pleaded not guilty in court to-day, and was held in $3,500 bail by Judge Fuller. She was returned to jail, being unable to furnish the bond.

Mrs. Stone is charged in Chicago with stealing $2,500 intrusted to her keeping by her ward, Miss Nellie Walker, with whom she lived. She was indicted for grand larceny by the Cook County Grand Jury on Thursday. Deputy Sheriff T. V. Morrison, who had trailed her to Brooklyn and then here, immediately came East to secure the woman's arrest.

Her capture was effected at the home of her sister, Dr. Amanda R. Cate, on May street, last night. The deputy, in company with Inspector Shannon and Patrolman McKenna, called at the doctor's office and were graciously received by Mrs. Stone as prospective patients. The police say that she represented herself to them as Mrs. Lucas. The officers served on her a fugitive warrant issued here, but "Mrs. Lucas" stoutly denied her identity and swooned. When told she must go to the police station she wept and admitted that she was Mrs. Stone, though she pleaded that she be permitted to remain over night in her sister's home with a guard.

The Chicago authorities charge that Mrs. Stone, who is a fine appearing woman of about fifty years, maintained a fashionable residence at No. 2,344 Prairie avenue, and that while Miss Walker lived there with her she persuaded her ward to withdraw from the bank $5,000. The girl took back $2,500 after intrusting the entire sum to Mrs. Stone, but was unable to recover the remainder. Then she instituted a civil suit, following which Mrs. Stone is alleged to have fled East.

Extradition papers have been forwarded from Chicago. It is believed that the woman will remain in jail until they arrive.

WEAVING NET ABOUT SLAYER OF STAULA GIRL

Detective Declares Only One Suspect Is Considered by Authorities.

"We have narrowed down this case to the consideration of one person. We expect to make out a case against this person."

That was the statement made this afternoon by one of the detectives at work on the mysterious slaying of little Louise Staula at Dedham, nearly two weeks ago. The two most important witnesses in the case, according to the same informant, are Celia Di Biasco, the girl who accompanied Louise part of the way to the field, and Mrs. James Kearney, who passed along the private road leading to the field late on the day the tragedy took place.

"We propose to keep right at this case until we have achieved success," said Captain Dugan. "A decisive move may be made at any time now."

ACCUSES WHITMORE OF PLOT TO POISON WIFE

FORMER FRIEND OF ACCUSED SWAMP SLAYER MAKES NEW CHARGE.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Theodore S. Whitmore, accused of killing his wife in the New Jersey swamp mystery, planned to poison his wife, according to "Gold Tooth Billy" Bartlett, an ex-convict and former associate of the accused motorman, now under arrest himself. Bartlett's startling charges are part of a confession he has made to the Jersey City police and his lawyer, Frank A. Boettner, and to Prosecutor Garvan.

Jealousy is given as the motive of Whitmore's plotting against his wife. The trial opens Monday in Jersey City. Besides Bartlett, as witnesses against Whitmore will be Lena Whitmore's sister, Mrs. Schmitters, and Georgie Dickinson of Boston, former woman friend of the accused man.

Bartlett's story follows:

"I saw Theodore Whitmore about Thanksgiving time, and he confided to me that he was going to murder his wife. He said he was going to put enough poison in her coffee to kill her and then drink a little himself, so that he would become ill, and it would appear to be an accident or suspicion would fall elsewhere. I was present on several occasions when he broke his knuckles on his wife's jaw.

"He was jealous of his wife's infatuation for a chap named Harry Hendrickson. He threatened to kill her several times because she went with this chap. Whitmore and I laid in wait for the two one night, and while I beat Hendrickson up, Whitmore beat his wife. He struck her so hard he broke his knuckles upon her."

Bartlett was arrested on January 3, the day after Whitmore had been locked up. He was held as a witness in the case, but refused to testify at the inquest of the preliminary hearing. He has offered now, however, to appear and testify in Brooklyn on a charge of highway robbery.

Whitmore was told of the statement of Bartlett and his declaration that he would tell enough to send Whitmore to death if promised immunity. The prisoner listened attentively and seemed surprised.

"Bartlett can't tell anything on me that isn't already known," he said. "All this stuff he has told he made up himself. It is a lie from beginning to end.

"I am an innocent man, and I will prove it when the time comes. I am glad my trial is to come off right away. I am tired of staying in jail, and I believe that when the trial is over I will be acquitted."

Alexander Simpson, counsel for Whitmore, said to-day that he was not apprehensive as to the effect of Bartlett's testimony.

When the case is called on Monday Supreme Court Justice Swazey will sit with Judge Blair in the court of Oyer and Terminer, Jersey City, to hear the evidence. It is expected that there will be a struck jury.

Whitmore is under indictment by the Grand Jury of Hudson County on a formidable array of evidence, assembled by Prosecutor Garvan, Assistant Prosecutor Vickers and the police of Harrison, N. J., where the gruesome tragedy occurred.

PLATT SAID HE LOVED ME; BUT I WAS A FOOL

---Mae C. Wood

From Tombs Cell Woman Declares She Will Fight Till All Platts Are Dead.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Mae Wood, who insists that it should be written Mae Wood-Platt, administered a verbal lashing to Senator Thomas C. Platt to-day in the Tombs when she was seen by a representative of this newspaper.

The famous "Easy Boss" claimed to be a monarch in politics, Mrs. Woods said, while at the same time he is a uninformed man who never read a book and depended for his education upon clippings.

"He said he loved me better than any one else in the world," said the woman with a smile. "I was a fool. I'll appeal and appeal this case until they get tired of me. It is all in the game!"

The interview with Mrs. Wood follows:

By Viola Rodgers.

Very plain and very provincial is Mrs. Mae Wood, who still adds Platt to her name. She told me yesterday in her new hotel, the Tombs, that she wasn't the same woman she was before she met Senator Platt. She specifies the exact time when worry and complications first set in to mar her good looks and peace of mind, and that was when she found—to use her facetious expression—that she belonged to the "three Platt-oon system" with the advent of Mrs. Janeway on the scene.

"Of course," said the Wood woman, "she knew the Senator long before I knew him. I knew nothing definite of their association until she came to live in the Arlington Hotel, where he lived, in 1903, and then the 'merry war' which has landed me in the Tombs began."

Of the cosmopolitan education which could have and must have been hers under the Senator's tuition there is not a trace. She speaks with a few English touches to her English accent, to be sure. She says "awnd" for plain every-day "and," and "awnswer," but otherwise her polish probably is about the same as it was when she was an Indiana high school girl of sweet sixteen.

She is many years over that. How many, she doesn't tell.

"Platt Was Ardent."

"You mean when you became first attracted to Senator Platt?" I asked.

She almost gasped a the aspersion.

"You mean when he first became attracted to me. I was not attracted. He was ardent, full of entreaty. He was what I then thought a great and distinguished man, but what I have since found to be a nominee for the Down and Out Club, with every point in favor of his election. I was ignorant of conditions. I was old enough to know better, but I was flattered by the attentions of such a great man, and when he asked me to come again to his office I did so. He told me he had never met anybody of my fascination and interest.

"My first visit was with Mrs. Canfield, whose father is a member of the Canadian Parliament. We were trying to get positions as teachers in the Philippines. The Senator was very chatty and good-natured, and showed a distinct liking for me. Well, I couldn't resist such flattering attentions.

"He never went to see anybody."

"Why didn't he call upon you?" I asked.

"Oh, well, everybody went to Senator Platt. He never went to see anybody. He was the 'Big Boss' and he thought he was, too, but really he was a serf and slave. His whole life was sectioned off into hours and half hours by his secretary. He had to see people—constituents and the like—and he scarcely had time to eat. In his enthusiastic moments he would say, 'Why, Mae, every county is to me a principality, and I rule over them just as a monarch would in a principality of the Old World.'"

"But what interested you in him?"

"Oh, he told me he loved me better than anybody he ever knew, and that he would marry me, and I thought that would be a pretty nice thing for me. I had my personal ambitions. Outside of politics he was an uninformed man. He never read a book, his only reading matter being clippings he had pasted in a large scrap book and the Tioga County paper. That he read from A to Z. He kept in mighty close touch with home politics."

Advised Him in Politics.

"Did he talk much to you of politics?"

"Oh, dear, yes. I knew always what was going on, and his secretary used to be amazed at the things the Senator would do at my bidding. I saved him thousands upon thousands of dollars by advising him to oppose the Post Check system. If it had carried, Platt, through his American Express Company, would have lost what the company makes in the money order business.

"The thanks I got for that and other things is the Tombs," she added, with irony.

"I found him so feeble on account of the two ribs that he broke two years before that I had to help him in and about the house, and I did it with wifely devotion.

Asked if she was sorry that she had brought the suit, Mrs. Wood said:

"Not sorry, but I was a fool. I should have known, for the Senator warned me what would happen. He is a hard man to beat. I am not giving up all hope. I believe I will be acquitted of this absurd charge when it gets to a jury. And besides I can appeal and appeal and drag the thing along until they get so tired of me that they will chuck the whole thing. I haven't any bail, do not expect any and am content to wait here in the Tombs until they decide to do something else with me. It's all in the game."

"I'M WINDING UP MY PUBLIC CAREER," MUSES TOM PLATT

NEW YORK, May 23.—Basking in the warm glow of his vindication in court on Thursday, United States Senator Thomas C. Platt yesterday paid his compliments to Mae C. Wood at his home, No. 133 East Eleventh street, and incidentally made the positive announcement that he will not be a candidate to succeed himself at the expiration of his term a year from next March.

"I am winding up my public career," said the Senator, with a deep note of sadness, "and I cannot tell you with what regret I shall retire to private life. But it is decreed."

Of particular semi-political interest is the reflection of Senator Platt on the habit of statesmen in scribbling their autographs on blank sheets of paper for all comers. A sheet of paper which the Senator declared he signed in blank, but which turned up at the Mae Wood trial at the bottom of an acknowledgment of his alleged marriage to the lady, furnished the text for his sermon in camera.

"Beware of Autographs."

"I'll never do it again as long as I live," declared Mr. Platt. "It is bad business, and any public man who thoughtlessly obliges an autograph seeker by putting his name on a sheet of paper in that fashion runs the risk of being trapped, just as she attempted to trap me."

With a dry smile, the Senator added:

"My advice to all public men is to be exceedingly careful to whom they give their autographs, and what they give them on. It is a fact generally known that all public men are peculiarly exposed to the attacks of women who seek them out, asking for positions or favors of different sorts, and end by trying to blackmail them."

"Nothing much to say about Mrs. Wood," he answered in reply to a question. "The case speaks for itself. I am gratified, of course, that it ended as it did. But I never had any doubt of the result."

"Mrs. Wood says the end hasn't been reached yet," the Senator was informed. "She declares that she will continue the fight against you."

"Oh, she does, eh? When, on what?"

"She doesn't disclose that. But she does say that as long as there is a Platt alive she will fight."

"Not Going to Die Yet."

"I will be dead when she comes out," said the Senator resignedly.

"Oh, she won't be sent away for such a long term as that, Senator."

The inference pleased the Senator, and his face lighted up with a smile.

"Well, I'm not going to die yet awhile," he said. Closing his eyes in thought, the Senator remained silent for several minutes and then said: "She gave me a terrible lot of trouble. But, then, that's all over now. I am satisfied. I am sorry for the woman, but she undoubtedly deserves punishment. But there, I don't propose to say anything more about her. Let's dismiss the subject."

"Just one thing more, Senator—Mae Wood has been described as having been clever and pretty."

"Never any more so than she is now," was the enigmatical reply.

GERMAN STEAMER AGROUND ON SHOAL

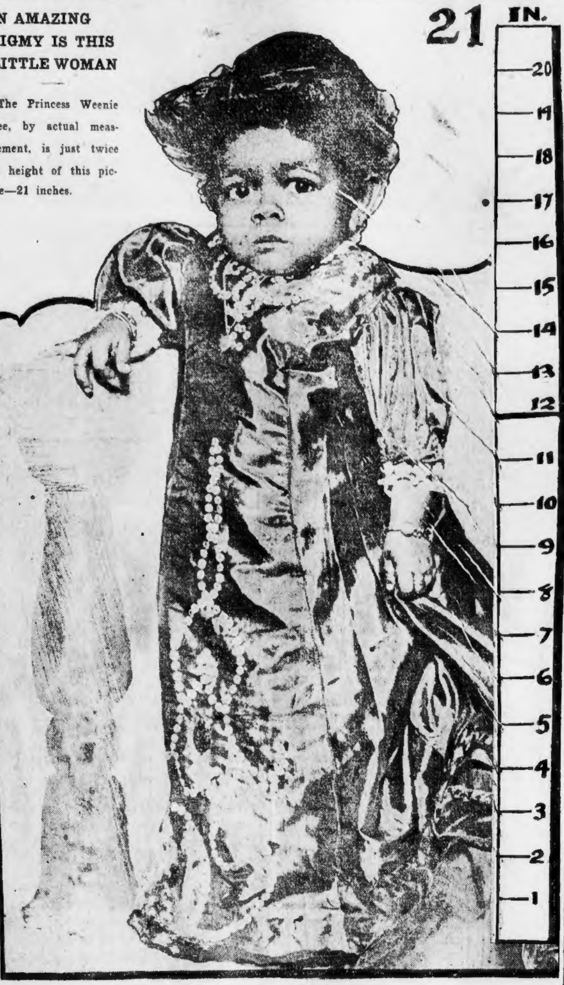
ATLANTIC, N. J., May 23.—The German steamer Hornsee, from Cuba to New York, ran aground on Brigantine Shoals during the dense fog last night. Life-savers are standing by to render aid, but the officers and crew aboard the vessel hope to float her. The Hornsee carries a cargo of sugar.

HERE IS THE PRINCESS WEENIE; SHORTER THAN A TWO-FOOT RULE

Beatrice Fairfax finds in her lot a lesson for the women who complain because they are too long, too short, too fat or too thin.

AN AMAZING PIGMY IS THIS LITTLE WOMAN

The Princess Weenie Wee, by actual measurement, is just twice the height of this picture—21 inches.



Her name is Princess Weenie Wee, and she is the most dignified little lady that you could imagine. She is eighteen years old and twenty-one inches tall, and makes a very good living as an exhibit at the Barnum & Bailey circus.

She likes to be called Princess, and she likes her red dress, with its long train, and she likes chicken for supper.

With those wants supplied the Princess is happy.

Life's handicap rests heavily on this tiny woman, and yet she is happy.

Think of that, my girls! Many of you have a thousand times greater reason to be happy than this poor little girl, and yet you are discontented.

I know one girl who is thoroughly unhappy because of one thing denied her. She has blessings innumerable, but her whole time is spent bemoaning the lack of this one thing.

She would be so much happier if she could force herself to be satisfied with something else and forget this one impossible thing.

We all have many, many things to be thankful for.

Just look into things and see what you especially have to be thankful for.

You may be young and strong and free from pain. Those are three wonderful blessings.

Perhaps you have a mother. That is the best of all things to be thankful for.

Of course, you feel that your own special woe is the greatest of all woes, but it isn't. Your next-door neighbor is just as satisfied that his woe is the worst of all.

Life is pretty evenly divided, and we all have our share of bitter and of sweet. The only difference is that some of us bear our sorrows like men and women, while some of us spend our time in whining and bewailing our fate.

Brace up and make the best of things, and be thankful that you are not just twenty-one inches high.

That would be something worth while lamenting, and yet this little Princess Weenie Wee is cheerfully getting as much joy as she can out of being able to earn her own living and wearing a red dress.

Give up crying for the moon and be satisfied with your own particular star of good fortune. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

$30 CIGAR IS GIVEN CANNON

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 23.—The King of England smokes cigars worth $1.50 each, but Speaker Cannon, the "Czar" of the House of Representatives, goes his rival some twenty times better when he smokes a cigar presented to him by the National Association of Piano Dealers.

Through local members of that body the Speaker received one cigar twenty inches long and two inches thick at its widest part, made out of the best selected Havana leaf and mounted in a plush box. The gift cost $50, of which, it is said, the cigar alone represented $30.

FISHED WITH TORCH; FINED

Charged with a violation of the new fish and game law, which prohibits fishing within the waters of Massachusetts by the aid of a torch, Cologa Jeweller of No. 22 Fleet street, Boston, and Maurice Flower of No. 49 Pitts street, this city, were arraigned before Judge Avery in the Quincy Court to-day, and were fined $50 each.

These two men, in company with three others, were captured last night by Officers Cogan and Bennett, while fishing in Quincy Bay. They were arraigned in court today, pleaded guilty, and all but Jeweller and Flower had their cases placed on file.

GIRL ON STAGE; FATHER SUICIDE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., May 23.—Pretty seventeen-year-old Ruth Fletcher, chorus girl of the Toreador Burlesque Company, playing at the Luzerne Theatre in this city, received word to-day that her father, the Rev. Rufus Fletcher, a Methodist minister of St. Joseph, Mo., had committed suicide last night because she went on the stage. She was broken hearted and it was some time before she recovered sufficiently to speak. She said she left home a year ago to go on the stage, despite her father's disapproval, but she never imagined he took the fact that she was on the stage so much to heart that it would lead him to self-destruction.

HARDEN GETS NEW TRIAL IN MOLTKE CASE

German Supreme Court Rules Sentencing of Editor, Who Scored 'Knights,' Unfair.

ATTACKED "ROUND TABLE"

LEIPSIC, May 23.—The Supreme Court of the empire decided to-day that the trial ending in the sentencing of Editor Maximillian Harden of Die Zukunft to prison for libelling General Count Cuno von Moltke was unfair. It sent the case back for a rehearing in the lower court.

Harden, one of the most radical German editors, began a fierce attack many months ago on a kind of kitchen cabinet, long in high favor with the Kaiser, and known among its members as the "Knights of the Round Table."

He accused the "Knights" not only of political intrigues, but of immorality. The Kaiser considered the showing so strong that he deprived all the accused men of their military and civil posts—nearly all being in high government positions—and banished them from his court.

Moltke, a nephew of the famous General of that name and commander of the Berlin garrison, sued Harden, lost his case, appealed, secured a conviction and was considered to have a kind of vindication, though he was not restored to the Kaiser's favor.

The reversal of the last verdict is a heavy blow to the entire group of accused officials.

Prince Zu Eulenberg, a former ambassador to Rome, and foreign minister, is awaiting trial at present on a charge of perjury in connection with his testimony before a military court which dismissed him from the army on the strength of Harden's charges.

LIVES, TALKS WITH BULLET HOLE IN BRAIN

Amazing Case Discovered by Hospital Surgeons Makes New Record.

TRIED TO SLAY DAUGHTER.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Despondent because he could not obtain work and determined that his fifteen-year-old daughter, Mary, should not live to be poverty stricken, Aram Legezyeska, of No. 214 East Fourth street, shot at the girl, and, after missing, fired a bullet through his own brain.

To-day in Bellevue Hospital, where Dr. Miller had rushed the man after the attempted murder, Drs. Miller, Ray and Clark operated upon him and found that the bullet had mushroomed as it passed through the centre of the brain and had torn a hole an inch in diameter when it emerged on the left temple.

Despite this fact and the additional one that the man is absolutely paralyzed, so far as locomotion is concerned, he is able to speak. His first words when he was revived were:

"Doctor, let me die. I'm useless. I've been out of work and I'm despondent. I can't bear to see my wife work and the child growing up in poverty."

The patient cannot possibly recover, but the doctors marvel at the slap which he has given on the face of Science by retaining his senses of speech and hearing, and his intelligence, although vital sections of the brain have been shattered. Only one case of this kind is recorded. That was the "crowbar case," which occurred fifteen years ago, when a man lived two days in the Massachusetts General Hospital after an assailant had thrust a crowbar through his brain, which is now in the Harvard Museum at Cambridge.

The first bullet Legezyeska fired clipped a lock of hair from his child's head. Two others were fired at himself, one going wild, the other taking effect. He had threatened to kill the girl before, she said.

The Dignity of Merchandising

By Tom Carlton

There was a time and not so many years ago when the shopkeeper was well worthy the pen of Dickens—stoop-shouldered, thin-faced and truckling.

He was a bargainer—a haggler for price—no article he sold had a price except what he could get for it. There was no dignity to his business. His methods were crude, his merchandise crude and his life in keeping with his primitive surroundings.

In the meantime there was a boy growing up in Philadelphia, as well as another in Conway, Mass., both with ideas and both ambitious.

These boys as clerks grew tired of the continued haggling and petty dickering of the storekeepers, and realized that such methods were forcing the seller and buyer apart.

They analyzed the situation and found these merchants weighted with long accounts, growing more hollow-cheeked and more stoop-shouldered underneath their weight. Customers who bought large bills of goods and had long accounts were considered desirable. If the accounts were not settled and accumulated age the customers grew in importance—a better customer he seemed to be. Long credits ruled the business world, as well as high prices and immense profits. The head of every household struggled with a big problem on settlement days. As well, the wholesale jobber and manufacturer's facilities were stunted and their resources crippled by too much credit, too long accounts and too few cash sales.

There was a problem to solve which meant much to the whole race—cost to be lessened, facilities for doing business increased. The burden of a false structure must be torn away from the shoulders of a burdened, stoop-shouldered shopkeeper. The elevation of a hard-working man to his proper place in the affairs of the world.

Thus did this change bring to the front the opulent merchant prince of to-day—the mammoth emporiums of trade which have altered the skyline of every city, whose organizations search the world for the rare and beautiful and the useful, reducing the cost of living and adding the luxuries and comforts of to-day.

No greater fact has aided in the upbuilding of the race than the merchant—the arbiter of prices—the inaugurator of the one-price system.

No trade, no profession has made the same progress. Nothing in science or art has hewed nearer to the line of dependence and truthfulness. No other element has done more for your comfort and happiness.

Foremost in the ranks of these men has stood the two boys, John Wanamaker and Marshall Field. They set the example, but as they have shown the way, so will greater men appear in the future. The little shopkeeper of to-day will be the merchant prince, or possibly more, in the days to come.

MIRANDY ON THE VALUE OF A WIFE---By DOROTHY DIX

I'SE TIAND TOTIN' THIS HYAH BUNCH ALL BY MAH LONESOME!
MATRIMONY
SINGLE BLESSEDNESS
JOHNSON

An' seein' dat hit was so expensive to do de things dat a wife had done, Jim was fairly driven back into matermony

"I'SE GOT troubles enough of my own," remarked Mirandy, "widout losin' any sleep over whut folks does whut ain't any kin to me, an' dat I never heered of befo'; but de way dat man in Injiany done, sho'ly did make me wish dat I belonged to de sect dat gits up lynchin' bees.

"I don't know when I se been so het up as when Ma'y Jane read me de odder night 'bout dat man runnin' off an' gettin' married, an' his wife's Ma an' Pa snatchin' de bride out from under his ve'y eyballs, an' de man instid of stealin' back his lady love, lak any man would dat didn't have skimmed milk in his veins instid of blood went to de court an' sued de ole folks to git back his wife.

"Dat was bad enough, Gord knows; an' ef any man had gone to law for me instid of fightin' for me dat's de las' dat white-levered cur dog ever would a seen of Mirandy.

Wives Are Cheap

"But de suin' warn't de wust part of hit. Nawm'. Hit seems dat when you replevins a article dat de law says dat you mus' put up a bond for twicet de value of de article, an' whut you reckon dat Injiany man estimate as twicet de value of his wife?

"Twenty dollars! Yassum, twenty po' little, miserable, measley plunks, wid de wear an' tear on his affections thrown in!

"Well, when Ma'y Jane read dat, Ike he give a snort, an' wid a meanful look at me, he say:

"'Hu! Dat brings de market price of wives down to ten dollars, which is mo' dan mos' of 'em is wuth; but I never speck to live to see de day dat a bridegroom would have enough sense to know hit.'

"'De Good Book say dat the price of a good wife am above rubies,' spons I.

"'Dat am one of dem passages which is to be took allegorical,' says Ike, 'an', anyway, dere's mo' women now dan dere was in dem days, an' de price is fell. Good wives is a drug on de market in dese days. I could go out an' marry fo' betwixt now an' sundown.'

"'Don't you dast to try hit, Ike Hopkins,' sclaims I.

"'Don't you be afeared, Mirandy,' says he, 'I done been an' drunk at de brook of matrimony, an' I'se got my fill.'

"'De value of a good wife,' says I, my mind a-turnin' back to dat low down Injiany man whut done put dat slur on my sect, 'ain't to be measured in dollars an' cents.'

"'No,' says Ike, 'hit depends on circumstances. Ef a man wants to be kept po' an' humble an' meek of spirit, dere ain't no odder kind of affliction on earth dat you kin put yo' money in dat'll do de wuk as sho' as a wife.'

"'Yassir, ef you wants to keep from settin' your heart on pilin' up riches, jest git married an' you'll be saved from de temptations, becaze you'll never have a dollar dat dere won't be a call for, for longery shut waists an' flower bonnets.'

"'Ef youse afraid dat youse gwine to git proud an' haughty, all you got to do is to git married, an' you kin bet yo' las' dollar dat yo' wife will henpeck you ontel you is dat barked dat you dassent call yo' britches your own.

"'Yassum, when you comes to think of whut a means of grace a wife is, ten dollars does seem lak a bargain counter price for one, an' I specks dat when dat Injiany man gits to heaven on dat cheap ticket he'll be shamed to pass in through de pearly gates.'

"'Huh! 'sclaims I; ten thousand soul's de size of dat man's could live on de pint of a cambric needle, an' den not be in telefoamin' distance of each odder. His soul is so little hit ain't wuth savin'.'

"'Well, whut do you think a woman is wuth as a wife?' axes Ike.

"'Dat depends,' 'spons I, 'but whutever hit is, hit's mo' dan she ever collects. Mo'over I notices dat dem whut puts de least value on dey wives is de ones dat misses dem de mos' when dey is gone.

"'Dere was Jim Johnsing, whut married Liza Ann, an' whut was always a-prognostificatin' 'bout how much hit took to clothe an' feed a wife, dough de Lawd knows dat all dat Liza Ann ever got to eat was de neck an' de backbone of de chicken, an' she always looked lak der dress has come out of de Ark.

"'Well, den Liza Ann up an' died one day, an' Jim had to hire out de cookin', an' de washin', an' de sewin', an' de patching, an' de mendin for his chillen, an' hit cost so much dat he had to git up early, an' wuk late at odd jobs on de side, to pay some three odder women to do de wuk dat po' Liza Ann had done. An' seein' dat hit was so expensive to git somebody to do de things dat a wife had done; Jim was farly driven back into matermony.

"'Yassir, I specks dat de price of a wife is whut cuts mos' widowers' mournin' short for de dear departed. Hit's a great thing to be united in de holy bonds wid a good cook an' washwoman dat can't give notice and quit, nor strike for higher wages.

"'An' den a wife is wuth a lot des to have somebody to blame when things go wrong. Dey tells me dat President Roosterfelt pays Mr. Loeb thousands and thousands of dollars des to stand up an' say: "I done hit," lak a wife has to do for nothin'.

"'I ain't a-wishin' to bring in no onpleasant subjecks into dis fambly conversation, but I des would lak to know whut would you do ef you couldn't say dat hit was me dat drug you off to dat pleasure exertion, de time dat hit rained, an' de perlice run everybody in on account of a pussonal difficulty betwixt two gentlemen?

"'An' whar would you be ef you couldn't say dat Ma'y Jane got her bigoty idees and her love of dress from me, an' dat Thomas Jefferson sho'ly did inherit his hard haid from his mother's side of de house, becaze you is a broad-minded man dat is open to conviction when de argument goes yo' way?

"'Yassir, as a scapegoat a wife sho'ly is wuth her weight in gold for dere ain't nothin' ever yit been invented to take de place. Ef hit warn't for dere bein' married we would think dat de man dat broke in business did so becaze he was lazy and shiftless, or a po' manager, but bein' as how he's married eve'ybody says hit's his wife's extravagance dat ruined him.

"'Lakwise, we's always hearin' dat hit was deir wives dat drove married men to drink an' to chasin' after odder women. Yassir, a wife's such a good excuse for ev'ything dat a man does wrong dat nobody kin really afford to do widout one.

"'An' dere's de man dat wuks up from de bottom to bein' rich an' famous. Sometimes he's a ole bachelor, but not often. Mos'ly he's a married man an' he's clum up de ladder on de back of his wife. Whut has she been wuth to him? God knows.

Prodding Him On

"'Maybe she done hit by stayin' in de background an' wukin' her fingers to de bone so dat he wouldn't have nothin' to worry 'bout but des gittin' ahead. She turned de grindstone an' kept de tools sharp, an' when he wanted a new one she was des standin' behind him ready to poke hit into his hand.

"'Sometimes she was des dat ambitious herself dat she was lak a goad in his side. He couldn't stop an' res' a minute but what she was proddin' him on, an' he had to climb. He couldn't help hisself.

"'Dat's whut de big man's wife is wuth to him, an' de price ain't never paid. Hit is so big dat hit would put dat Mr. Rockafeller in de po' house.'

"'Well, Mirandy,' says Ike, 'wid all yo' faults, an' big an' fat as you is, you is wuth a million dollars to me.'

"'Oh, Paw,' cried little Teddy Roosterfelt, 'is Maw wuth all of dat to you?'

"'Dat she is, my son,' says Ike, a-pattin' dat innercent chile on de haid.

"'Well,' sclaims little Teddy Roosterfelt, 'I wisht dat you would sell part of Maw an' buy me a goat cart.'"

Marriage---At First

My Uncle Alexander Dilates on Love's Young Dream

By KENNETT HARRIS

MY Uncle Alexander used to say that as a general thing a man was capable of hoeing his own row. If the growth of the potatoes was weed-choked by reason of the slighting of the task, and there were few resulting tubers to the hill, that was the man's own lookout—providing that it was not the hired man.

Consequently, my Uncle Alexander never offered words of counsel, criticism or admonition, he said, unless he was sure that they were needed.

Apropos of potatoes, also of admonition,

"When is it to be, Bud?"

Jerry Terbush was over to our place one day helping to cut the Early Rose "seeds" for planting. We were all three of us squatting in the root cellar plying our clasp knives, when my Uncle Alexander referred to Jerry's approaching marriage.

"When is it to be, Bud?" he asked. "Tol'able soon now, ain't it?"

"Tol'able soon," replied Jerry in as careless and matter-of-fact way as he could assume.

"Well, there's nothing like it," said my Uncle Alexander. "I don't know anything that a man can take more comfort in than being married—right at first. I can remember when I was first married. Oh, shucks! The sparkin' was nothin' to it. You're goin' to have more fun than a cage o' monkeys.

"There's one thing, though, Jerry, that you want to remember, and that is that a woman hadn't ought to split kindlin' an' carry water and the like o' that as long as there's a stout, husky man around the house.

Don't Let Her

"SHE'LL want to do them things, and let you rest yourself in the parlor on the lounge—right at first. But don't you let her do it."

"Well, I cal'late it ain't likely I would," said Jerry, somewhat indignantly. "It's my notion that a man that would let a woman split kindlin' ought to be rid on a rail. I'd help to ride him, too."

"You've got the right kind of an idea," said my Uncle Alexander. "That was the idee I had—at first. I dunno's I'd want to go quite as far as that now, being as there has been times when the old lady has had to take a holt of the axe and do the best she could. But I've never made a regglar thing of it.

"I aim to keep the water bucket full—me and the boy here, atween us. I don't reckon you'd object to washin' dishes if Hetty should ast you?"

"I dunno's I would," replied Jerry. "I don't see why I should mind. I've washed dishes afore now, and I cal-late I can again."

"You'd be the dumdest kind of a fool if you did object," said my Uncle Alexander. "That's half of the pleasure—at first. I don't know of anything I'd sooner do—if I was a young man like you and I was married to a gal like Hetty.

"'You go right along an' set down,' she'll say when you offer to help—at first. 'I'll 'tend to this,' she'll say. 'You can set down here an' watch me, though, if you're a mind to.'

Do What's Proper

"'NO, by gosh!' says you, 'I'm a-goin' to help. I'll wash an' you can dry. I'd sooner wash dishes than eat.'

"'That's becus you don't like my cookin',' she says, sassy like. 'Get out from under my feet, you great lummox.'

"She tries to sidge in atween you an' the dishpan, but you take her around the waist with both of your paws an' lift her an' set her down easy to one side. Then she slaps your face an' you do what's proper under the circumstances.

"'Massy me!' she says, 'what am I a-goin' to do with such an old bear? Well, if you're bound an' set an' determined to, you've got to take off your coat an' put on an apern. I ain't a-goin' to have grease spots on you for me to take out.'

"So she goes to the closet an' she gets out one o' them big gingham aperns that cover her from her chin to her toes, an' you stand stiff with your arms out while she puts it on an' ties it in a bow behind.

"Then she looks at you an' goes off in a fit o' laffin', until she chokes an' you hafter pat her on the back. Then you both laff an' go to work on the dishes.

You Get Your Pay

"'IT'S heaps of fun, and she looks so cute with her sleeves rolled up above her elbers an' her rosy cheeks, that every oncet in a while she has to tell you to quit gawpin' at her an' give her suthin' to dry.

"Then you get a hurry on you, but she keeps up her end right along, the best you can do, until at last one of the best plates slips out of your hand and goes kersmash on the floor in a hundred pieces.

"Then she busts out a laffin' at the sight o' your face—at first.

"After awhile you've got the hull kit an' caboodle cleared up an' out o' the way an' she takes your apern off.

"'Well?' says you.

"'Well what?' says she.

"'I'm a waitin' for my pay,' you says.

"'Thank you,' she says. 'I'm much obliged, an' you done pretty good.'

"'It's got to be suthin' more than that,' says you; an' then she comes up close to you and puts her hands on your shoulders an' reaches on her tip toes an'—Hm-m' Eh, Jerry?"

"You ought to know better, at your age," Jerry said, blushing.

"Well, I draw the line at washin' dishes—now," said my Uncle Alexander.

The Manicure Lady

Solomon Was Her Ideal of a Good Provider

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"GEORGE," said the Manicure Lady, "I have just come from shopping."

"Well," said the Head Barber, "did you buy anything good?"

"I should say I did!" exclaimed the Manicure Lady. "Of course most of the money was papa's, but I threw in six dollars that I had saved out of my earnings, and you ought to see the lovely lingerie dress and swell shirtwaists I bought.

"Only eighty dollars, and I can remember the time—it was not long ago—when the same stuff would have cost eighty-two dollars cash. You know them swell stores won't trust you for anything.

"Of course Pa made an awful howl about the seventy-four dollars he had to cough up, but I let him rave, because I know that the old man is on one of them rapid transit commissions, cutting up a little easy money now and then, so I didn't pay no attention to his tears.

"'My daughter,' he said, 'do you realize that you are bringing my gray hairs in sorrow down to the check book? Do you understand that every time you go shopping I have to clip coupons?

"'Remember, daughter, that I have to support a worthless son, and when I have a girl that can almost earn her own living, it makes my heart ache to think that she can't pay cash instead of having the stuff come to the house C. O. D.?'"

Sides With Old Man

"I DON'T blame the old man," said the Head Barber. "It's bad enough to have to support the wife, without buying gowns for girls that is old enough and big enough to take care of themselves. I haven't got any grown ups, but when I have, they will have to scratch for themselves. That's the kind of a sport I am."

"It wasn't so in the old days," said the Manicure Lady. "Look at King Solomon, with all his wives and his thousand children. I don't know how much salary King Solomon drew, but anyhow it was not as much as President Roosevelt gets, and Roosevelt never wrote no proverbs.

"But there ain't anything in the life of Solomon to show that he ever made a howl when one of his daughters wanted a Merry Widow hat or a new-form corset, or a string of coral beads. I reckon this here King Solomon was a pretty game guy.

"And this here King David, George. There was another good old sport. I ain't sure whether he was Solomon's father or Solomon's son, but anyhow he followed his relative's example and was there with all kinds of squaws and papooses.

"He didn't get any too much salary a year himself, so the records tells us, but there ain't nothing in the things he wrote that shows any yellow streak.

"There's no use talking, George. What the world likes is generous folks. They say all the world loves a lover, but I think all the world loves a provider more.

"I always think, when I am riding down in the subway and see a feller which is built like a Greek god, that I could be very happy with him if he didn't happen to be a shipping clerk or some similar kind of a producer.

Afraid of Wealth

"IT'S all right for Mister Roosevelt to beef about predatory wealth, George, but you can take it from me that most of us girls, while we have naturally warm hearts and impetuous natures, don't care how predatory the wealth is so long as it comes sailing through the door of the old homestead."

"Pa set up an awful howl."

"There is lots of things in this world besides money," said the Head Barber.

"Sure there is," assented the Manicure Lady, "but girls is such blind creatures that they can't see lots of things.

"Love is a wonderful layout, George, and it's great to think about the June roses that blooms on them there hedges, but the stuff that blooms on the dumb waiter, such as chickens and chops and asparagus, is what we demand and what we must have.

"Girls is mostly tender-hearted, George, but they don't like to embark on the sea of matrimony in a second-hand rowboat."

"If most of the girls only knew it," said the Head Barber, "they are in pretty good luck when they march up to the altar. They don't stop to think of all the sacrifices we men make for them."

"We don't care about the sacrifices," said the Manicure Lady. "What we want is home runs."

CASSEROLE

ONE pint of chopped meat (lamb, chicken or veal), add beaten egg, cracker crumbs, fine chopped small onion, salt and pepper, red pepper also, if desired; little parsley chopped fine. Mix all together. If you have any gravy add that also. Then two cups of cold stewed tomatoes. Have enough rice already cooked to line a dish, sides, top and bottom. Place mixture in dish lined with the rice and cover top with rice, also. Cook in double boiler for an hour at least. This is delicious, and a convenient way to use up a roast. One may also use beef or pork, but lamb or veal are especially good.

BOILED RICE

THERE is a delicious substitute for the old way of boiling rice. Put one cup of rice into a pudding bag that has a capacity of about one quart; tie the bag so as to leave room for the rice to swell and put this into a kettle containing a liberal quantity of boiling water. Add a teaspoon of salt and boil briskly for half an hour; then turn from the bag and serve with cream and sugar. Rice cooked in this way is far superior to ordinary boiled rice.

MAPLE SUGAR JELLY

THIS is my favorite recipe: One large cup maple sugar, boiled ten minutes in a cup and a half of water; half box of gelatine dissolved in little cold water. When sugar has boiled turn on the gelatine then add a little over a pint of luke-warm water and set on ice to harden. Serve with whipped cream, flavored with vanilla. It is delicious.

DANDELION WINE

OVER six quarts of dandelion blossoms pour four quarts of boiling water, and let stand for several days, stirring frequently. Strain the juice; add four pounds of sugar and let it come to a boiling point. When cool add two slices of toasted bread one lemon (sliced), one yeast cake. Let stand for four or five days. Add handful of raisins and one-half glass of brandy. Let stand one or two days more, then strain and put in bottles or jugs with muslin tied over the top.

TIP-TOP CAKE

ONE and one-half cups sugar, one tablespoon butter, two eggs, one cup sweet milk, one teaspoon soda, two teaspoons cream tartar (or two heaping teaspoons of baking powder), two and one-half cups flour. Flavor to suit. This is very nice.

Advice to the Lovelorn---By Beatrice Fairfax

RUNNING A RISK

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady nineteen years old and hold a position as stenographer and bookkeeper. It is in a wholesale place. For the past eight months there has been a salesman come in my place on business regularly every three weeks, and he has very much attracted my attention, as he is so refined and manly. Hundreds of other salesmen come in here, but somehow I only took a liking to him. He always seemed so friendly to me, and the time that he was here he gave all kinds of hints showing that he liked me and would wish my company. He also questioned me if I keep company with any fellow, but I told him "No," as I have never met one whom I really cared for. He said, "I wish I could believe you." Now, Miss Fairfax, I do not know his name, nor does he know mine. Would it be right or proper if the next time I see him I ask him his name and also say if he wished I would be glad to have him call on me or write to me?

F. S.

YOU know nothing about this man, not even his name, nor whether he is married or single, and I think you had better let the affair go no further until you do know something. He probably talks just that way to many other girls. I do not like to spoil your romance, but I am sure that you had better pause before striking up a friendship with a man who is an utter stranger to you.

MERELY FRIENDSHIP

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty years of age, and a cousin of mine showed my picture to a friend of his. The picture impressed him so that he insisted upon being introduced to me, and we have become friends. This gentleman attended college and there has been a continual correspondence between us for the past year. During that time he has come to the city quite a few times and he called to see me. At first his letters were pretty formal, but now they have improved. He has not given me the least bit of encouragement that he has any serious intentions with me. I have come to care for him, but my folks are at me all the time to put an end to this—either to ask him of his intentions toward me, or whether he only intends to play with my affections. I know he is not in the position to get married, but I am willing to wait if he would tell me that he will marry me some day. Kindly advise me if I should speak to him upon this subject, as I have some other chances, but I can't set my mind to any until I find out what his intentions are, as I care for him. I don't know whether I should stop writing. If I do, I'm sure he would get angry, as he usually does when my letters are not prompt.

S. F.

I SHOULD say that his feeling for you was merely that of friendship at present. It is quite possible that he may grow to care for you, but do not think of asking him his intentions or you will lose him entirely. If he is still at school and has no prospect of marrying soon, I think you are rather foolish to throw away good chances for such an uncertain possibility.

NEW KINKS FOR THE TABLE

"HAVE you noticed that many hostesses are serving rock candy crystals instead of sugar with after-dinner coffee?" inquired an observing woman. "I've tried it myself, and have found that the prettiest effect is gained by buying an equal amount each of red and white rock candy and mixing the irregular shaped crystals in a low glass bonbon dish.

"These are served with a bonbon spoon. There's an especial advantage in this plan for those who want very little sugar as the smallest quantity possible may be taken, less than an ordinary piece of cut sugar. This rock candy is absolutely pure, very cheap, and gives a particularly delicious flavor to black coffee.

"Another new kink I noticed at a luncheon was the passing of two little glass dishes with the salad course. One dish held finely minced green peppers and the other tiny slices of little new onions. The guests took what they wanted and sprinkled it on the salad, which was a combination of lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers.

"At the same luncheon a fancy omelet with burning rum was served instead of the usual sweet course. Instead of the ordinary river of fire running placidly around the platter the effect was quite spectacular and reminded one of miniature volcanoes. I found that this effect was the result of stacking lumps of sugar in heaps at intervals round the platter."

ENGINEER IS KILLED; LYNN TRAIN RUNS WILD

FIREMAN SAVES PASSENGERS ON NARROW GAUGE WHEN NEARING TERMINAL.

In an effort to recover his hat, which blew off as he was leaning from the cab window watching a hot box, Engineer Samuel D. Cyr of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn road lost his balance as his train passed Harbor View station, going at the rate of thirty miles, to-day, fell to the ground and was fatally injured.

Without a guiding hand at the throttle, the train rushed toward the East Boston terminal, less than a mile away, while passengers rose to their feet and screamed in terror.

Fireman Robert A. Patton, doing his second day's work in an engine cab, jumped from the other side of the cab when he heard the cries of brakeman and passengers, saw the engineer was gone, and managed to seize the throttle and bring the train to a stop beyond the bridge.

Had the fireman's nerve failed him in the critical situation, the train would have rushed through the terminal, torn away the bumpers and landed in the harbor.

Engineer's Head Crushed.

"Nothing could have stopped us," declared one passenger in the smoker.

Patton brought the train to a stop, it was declared, in about two hundred yards.

The train crew ran to where Engineer Cyr lay unconscious by the side of the track. In his fall he struck on his head against the rocks forming the abutment of the road. His head was terribly crushed and his skull was fractured.

A New Haven Railroad engineer took charge of the train when Fireman Patton announced he was too overcome by the accident to attempt running it, and backed to where the engineer lay. Cyr was lifted into the baggage car and the New Haven man ran the train slowly into the terminal. When it arrived Cyr was dead. His skull was fractured and he was otherwise terribly injured.

Passengers, many white faced at the thought of their narrow escape, cheered Fireman Patton.

Tried to Catch Hat.

How the accident could have occurred, Superintendent John A. Fenno of the road could not understand. The train left Lynn at 7:45 and runs express from Orient Heights. At Beachmont a hot box on the engine held it up for a few minutes and it is persumed that Engineer Cyr was leaning out of the window watching it when his hat blew off and, in attempting to recover it, he let go his hold and plunged through the window.

The accident happened as the train passed the Harbor View station at a point where the engineer generally slows up. It was making between thirty and thirty-five miles an hour when Fireman Robert A. Patton brought it to a stop.

About 500 passengers were on the train, and the greatest excitement prevailed when it was learned what had happened. Passengers in other coaches besides the smoker saw the form of the engineer as it rolled away from the track, and nearly every person was on his or her feet when the train came to a sudden halt.

Delayed Traffic.

Traffic was delayed about half an hour while the body of the engineer was taken aboard the train.

"Engineer Cyr was one of the oldest men in our employ," said Superintendent Fenno to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, "and was a reliable, competent man. How such an accident could have happened I do not know. I am making an investigation now. Fireman Patton, I am informed, stopped the train as quickly as possible."

The engineer was fifty years of age, lived at No. 10 Wheeler street court, Lynn, and leaves a widow and two children.

Medical Examiner Magrath was notified, and after viewing the remains of the engineer, gave permission to have the body removed to his home.

The accident cast a general gloom over the entire system. Engineer Cyr was known to every employe and was very popular. He had been running trains out of the East Boston terminal so long that he had become known to a large number of the regular passengers.

CONGRESS QUITS TUESDAY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Congress will adjourn Tuesday, according to a decision reached to-day in a conference between the House and Senate leaders.

Actresses should never get married—and why. "All actresses are failures as wives," declares Frederick M. Davidson, "to begin with." All about it in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

GREAT FLEET AT SEATTLE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 23.—Thousands of visitors and the entire population of the city thronged the shores to-day to greet the round-the-world battleship fleet. The harbor presented a thrilling scene with its motley craft lined up to do honor to the big warships. A parade and fireworks are on the program for afternoon and evening.

Anty Drudge Advises the Fireman.

Fireman—"Morning, Anty Drudge! You had better go over to Mrs. Slims; she's terribly burned."

Anty Drudge—"How did it happen?"

Fireman—"Over-heated stove. Trying to get the fire hot enough to boil her clothes. My wife was badly burned last week doing the same thing."

Anty Drudge—"Yes, I'll go right over. But look here, young man! Get your wife Fels-Naptha. Then she won't have to boil the clothes. Just use lukewarm or cool water; let the clothes soak for half an hour; that's all there is to it."

Friendship begins with acquaintance. All Fels-Naptha wants is an introduction and it will become your boon companion in laundry and kitchen.

We are advertising to get Fels-Naptha that introduction into new homes.

Then we depend on the soap itself to keep it there.

If Fels-Naptha wouldn't do what we claim; if it wouldn't wash clothes quicker and better in cool or lukewarm water without hard labor or boiling; if it wouldn't save time, work, fuel and health—would over a million women use it every washday?

Not much.

But Fels-Naptha will do these things and more; has done them and is doing them for more and more progressive women every year.

Helen Morton, Undaunted by Former Experience, Is to Marry Another Title

Madame Helen Morton, divorced wife of Duc de Valencay, and daughter of Levi P. Morton of New York, who is to marry Prince Auguste of Arenburg.

FORMER DUCHESS DE VALENCAY TO BECOME THE PRINCESS OF ARENBURG.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Cable dispatches from Paris, announcing Madame Helen Morton's intention to marry another foreign prince, namely, Prince August of Arenburg, has amazed the friends of the beautiful daughter of Levi P. Morton, former Governor of New York and ex-Vice-President of the United States. Her unhappy marriage with the Duc de Valencay, brother of Prince Helie de Sagan; the astonishing disclosures at the divorce trial, her broken health as the result of the notoriety attending the case, and her emphatic condemnation of titled foreigners as husbands at the time are now recalled, with surprise that she should be still willing once more to venture into the dangerous experiment of wearing a European title.

Free comment is made upon the curious parallelism of her affair and that of Anna Gould—divorced from Count Boni de Castellane, and now planning to marry Prince de Sagan, brother of the man whom Helen Morton was forced to divorce for his coldness, neglect, and cruelty to the point of personal violence.

Miss Morton was first married in October, 1901, to Count Talleyrand-Perigord, Duc de Valencay. It was but a very short time before rumors of unhappiness and disillusionment on the part of the Duchess were heard, but nothing definite was known about the conditions under which the pair were living until divorce proceedings were brought in the Summer of 1904. At that time, in spite of the desperate efforts made to keep the proceedings a secret, it became known that the Duc frequently exercised the European privilege of personally chastising his wife when it suited his lordly pleasure.

He was charged with cruelty and neglect, and much of the evidence in the case was entirely withheld from the public.

The Duc entered a counter suit, instigated, it was reported at the time, by his mother, because his wife had borne no children to inherit the Valencay estate, in spite of the fact this same estate was saved by Levi P. Morton's money, when it was in danger of falling into other hands than those of the Valencays. The Duc also alleged mutual antipathy and incompatibility in his suit.

Won Complete Victory.

The French courts threw out the Duc's counter suit, annulled the marriage settlement, restored to her the gifts made since the marriage and further upheld her claim by condemning the husband to pay the costs of the divorce suit. She won a complete victory.

Little is known here of Prince August of Arenburg, Madame Morton's new fiance, save that he is a member of one of the oldest of Germany's noble families, that he is reputed to be rich and possesses estates in Belgium and Germany.

CELEBRATE 'EMPIRE DAY'

The Canadian Club of Boston will celebrate Empire Day and perpetuate the memories of the home land by addresses, reception and dance at the headquarters, No. 3 Joy street, next Monday evening.

The principal guest of the evening will be Hon. E. M. McDonald, M. P., one of the most brilliant public men of Canada and an eloquent speaker. He will speak on "The present and future of Canada, and its relations to the empire and the United States." Dr. MacPhatter, president of the Canadian Club of New York; presidents of the local British societies of Boston and other distinguished guests will be present.

Mr. McDonald will be dined by prominent members of the club at the Bellevue Hotel, and the reception will be held at the club from 7:30 to 8:30. After the addresses there will be dancing until midnight, and music will be furnished by the orchestra from the Salem Cadet Band. It is expected fully 500 persons will attend the celebration.

FIVE "YEGGS" RESENTENCED

In Superior Criminal Court to-day before Judge Bond five alleged "yeggs," rounded up in the South End by Inspector Morrissey in May, 1907, were sentenced anew, their request for a new trial having been denied by the Supreme Bench. All had been convicted in May last year of having burglar tools in their possession.

Sentences were reimposed as follows: Thomas Johnson, sentence reduced from three years in the House of Correction, three days solitary, to two years, one day solitary; John Harris, William Dolan, John Williams, Frederick Dickerson and John Owens, sentences reduced from four to six years, three days solitary in State prison, to from three to five years, one day solitary.

FILENE SCORES ASSAILANTS OF BRANDEIS

Declares Attorney Sincere in Labors to Defeat Merger and Flays His Foes.

AIDS MANY PUBLIC WORKS

Edward A. Filene has written to the BOSTON AMERICAN a protest against attacks made upon Attorney Louis D. Brandeis because the latter is fighting the merger.

"We would feel that not only the State, but the whole country, had suffered an irreparable loss if any attempt to murder the reputation of any man honestly fighting for what he believes to be right should be successful," writes Mr. Filene. "I now feel that sense of danger of an irreparable loss if the struggle for the right and wrong of the merger should be allowed to degenerate into an attempt to murder the character of the anti-merger leader, Mr. Louis D. Brandeis.

"The danger lies not so much in the possibility that those who know and have watched Mr. Brandeis's great public work during all his life in Boston will believe the mistaken attacks of Mr. Warner and some of the other too reckless pro-merger advocates as in the fact that many of the men who do not know Mr. Brandeis may believe these pro-merger advocates, because the idea of freely giving one's professional services without stint and without pay to help the public good is yet far more uncommon, therefore, less believed in, than that of giving money for a public cause.

Gives Services Freely.

"If a man were to give $50,000 a year for some public cause, and many of our men do give such an amount, or a larger one, that would not create astonishment. If Mr. Brandeis gives, as he does give, his professional services for a cause he believes he ought to assist in the public interest, the action is yet so uncommon as to lend itself to the arousing of suspicion of his motives."

A pro-merger insinuation against Mr. Brandeis is based upon the circumstance that in the contest for the control of the Illinois Central road the law firm with which he is connected was employed in the capacity of attorneys to obtain proxies for E. H. Harriman. Mr. Filene deplores this proceeding on the part of any pro-merger partisan as being as inexpressibly shocking as "if in a football contest one of the contestants should suddenly bury a knife in the back of his opponent."

Mr. Filene says that he personally has taken no side in the merger fight, standing like a vitally interested spectator and "glorying in the contest which is developing a wider and better vision of understanding in the contestants themselves and a wider and better understanding in us as we look on."

Declares Sincerity.

But Mr. Filene deplores the attack upon Mr. Brandeis to which he refers, and says:

"Is it not just as simple that a man should give his professional services without pay for the public good as that he should give money? If we accept this as so—and we must accept it in the case of Mr. Brandeis—all basis for attack upon him disappears."

To illustrate his personal faith in the sincerity of Mr. Brandeis's motives, Mr. Filene cites the fact that Mr. Brandeis would accept no pay for fighting the granting of a ninety-nine-year lease of the West End to the Boston Elevated Railway.

"When the victory was won," Mr. Filene states, "I wrote him asking for a bill and, not receiving one, I called upon Mr. Brandeis and he said there was no bill, that he had made it a rule not to make charges for work of that kind. He explained that he had made it a rule to give some part of his time each day to public work, and that if he had given an unusually large amount of his time to this question, it was only along the lines of the determination that he had always had in mind, that as soon as he could in justice to his family and his partners afford to do so, he intended to give the largest part of his time freely to public work.

Accepted No Pay.

"Mr. Brandeis's services to the Public Franchise League, which are a matter of public knowledge and public record, have been continuous and almost uninterrupted for at least seven years and have been entirely without pay," writes Mr. Filene. "As treasurer of that organization I am certainly in a position to know where the money came from for necessary expenses and how it was expended. These services include the helping to bring about a satisfactory solution of the subway question, the sliding scale for gas and many other equally important questions. He has also contributed liberally in cash to the necessary expense of the organization.

"Beyond this, there have been no public questions since the first subway fight—and I have been interested in many—in which I have not felt free to go to Mr. Brandeis for advice and assistance and in no case has he ever made a charge for the same or accepted any recompense. This is from my personal knowledge."

JAY GOULD AGAIN WINS

LONDON, May 23.—Jay Gould defeated Eustace Miles again to-day at tennis, this time in the Olympic games series. He won in straight sets, 6—5; 6—4; 6—4.

Gould's victory over Miles to-day was his fourth. He met the British champion first about a year ago in the English—practically world's—championship tournament, and won easily.

Miles could hardly believe himself defeated and came to America for a return match a few weeks ago. Gould won again, more easily than before. To Miles's surprise—for his victorious opponent had everything to lose and nothing to gain by a fresh meeting—the young man offered to give the Englishman another chance on his home ground, went to London and won for a third time, still apparently with scarcely an effort.

Both were contestants in the Olympic series and had gradually eliminated all opponents until they were once more opposed in the finals, which Gould took without giving Miles even a single set's lookin.

DIVORCE SUIT MAY COST HIM BISHOPRIC

Rev. Charles LeRoy Goodell's Chances of Election Slump as Story Spreads.

EXONERATED BY CHURCH

By Boston American Leased Wire.

BALTIMORE, May 23.—The Rev. Dr. Charles LeRoy Goodell of New York, who stood fourth on the list of candidates for a Methodist church bishopric, when stories of a Providence, R. I., divorce suit began to be whispered about at the general conference the other day, to-day stands ninth on the list. Baltimore is still discussing the possibility of Dr. Goodell's election and the interpretation that the public may put upon it as possibly indicating the attitude of the church.

Notwithstanding the fact that a Rhode Island ecclesiastical council unanimously acquitted Dr. Goodell "of the charges and specifications of immorality," his friends here fear that the divorce case of Goodell vs. Goodell may effectually blast his ambitions for a seat in the board of bishops.

"Enemies Went to Work."

The eighth ballot again resulted in "no choice." The vote stands as follows:

Wilson S. Lewis, Sioux City, Ia., 476; William A. Quale, Chicago, 471; Homer C. Stuntz, field secretary, board of foreign missions, Madison, N. J., 443; Charles W. Smith, Pittsburg, 420; Edwin H. Hughes, Greencastle, Ind., 389; Robert McIntyre, Los Angeles, Cal., 348; David G. Downey, New York, 339; Joseph B. Hingeley, Minneapolis, 237; Charles L. Goodell, New York, 174; Henry C. Jennings, Cincinnati, 157; R. J. Cooke, book editor Methodist Episcopal Church, New York, 149; Samuel Dorchester, Jr., Pittsburg, 119; M. C. B. Mason (colored), Cincinnati, 115.

When whispers began to be heard in the general conference that "Dr. Goodell is a divorced man," the pastor of Calvary M. E. Church, New York, stood fourth on the list of candidates. He had come up from thirteenth place. His supporters looked for his election on the next ballot. "Then," said Dr. Goodell, "my enemies went to work."

Dr. Goodell, according to former associates in New England, served three Methodist charges at Providence for a nine-year term beginning in 1880. He was pastor of Trinity Church there when, on December 21, 1886, the case of Louella M. Goodell vs. Charles L. Goodell was heard in the Supreme Court.

Petition Dismissed.

Two days were occupied by the hearing, the Rev. Dr. Goodell denying every allegation in his wife's petition. At the conclusion of the inquiry the case was taken under advisement.

In the meantime, Dr. Goodell had asked to be tried by an ecclesiastical court. His prayer was granted. The Council was in session two days. It unanimously acquitted the clergyman of the "charges and specifications of immorality."

On the following day, January 1, 1887, the decision of the Supreme Court was made public, that "the divorce is denied and the petition dismissed, because the conduct of the petitioner has been such that she is not entitled to it."

Having been exonerated by the ecclesiastical court, Dr. Goodell continued to occupy the pulpit at Trinity, Providence, until the termination of his term, when he was transferred by the annual conference.

His present charge is the largest Methodist Episcopal Church in the world.

BRIARCLIFF WINNER WEDS RICH BEAUTY

John Hamilton Tyson, Millionaire Auto Enthusiast, Takes Society Girl as Bride.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

STAMFORD, Ct., May 23.—John Hamilton Tyson and Miss Grace Ethel Starr, daughter of Dr. Alfred R. Starr of No. 10 East Ninety-second street, New York, were married at Brook Ridge, the Summer home of the bride's parents, at 11.30 to-day, and it was a quiet wedding, just the members of the two families being present. Griswold Daniel of New York was Tyson's best man. The bride was unattended. She possesses remarkable beauty, and was raidiant in a gown of white satin.

The groom was sued last night by his chauffeur, who alleges that he has lost his health by Tyson's reckless driving, but the legal action did not put a damper on the wedding festivities.

The Briarcliff trophy, which Tyson won with his Isotta recently, played a prominent part in the marriage. The bride and groom drank one another's health from it, and then the guests drank to the newly-married pair's happiness.

Tyson is twenty-two, and recently he inherited a large fortune. His bride is about his age, and is a very beautiful girl. Her father is commodore of the Riverside Yacht Club, of which Tyson is rear commodore.

ARMED NIGHT RIDERS OPEN FIRE ON HOME

Tobacco Grower's House Nearly Blown Up After He Defied Marauders.

TROOPS IN HOT PURSUIT

RIPLEY, Ohio, May 23.—The worst outrage yet attempted by night riders in Ohio was the armed attack on Walter Hook's residence early to-day. A band of thirty-five night riders attempted to destroy tobacco beds on Hook's farm at Red Oak, five miles north of Ripley, at 3 a. m. Hook was watching his beds.

He retired to the house and ordered the party away. They did not move and Hook fired his shotgun to scare them. The captain of the night riders called "fire," and a volley of thirty-five shotguns was emptied into Hook's home, nearly tearing one end out, but injuring none of the inmates. Hook fired three times at the riders.

The riders' shots knocked all the windows out of the front of the house, scattering glass over the sleeping children. Several shots passed through Hook's clothing. The riders then proceeded to scrape the tobacco beds and departed. Hook's telephone was cut, and he walked three miles to neighbors, telephoned Marshal Dan Miller at Ripley, who, with Captain Knauss, Troop B., O. N. G., stationed here, and twelve troopers, started at 5 o'clock in pursuit of the riders.

Hook is outspoken against the equity. His barn was burned early this Spring, its burning being attributed to night riders.

Hook found a shotgun left by one of the men, and claims to have recognized the voice of the leader.

WOMAN IS BEATEN UNCONSCIOUS, LEFT DYING NEAR HOME

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 23.—Night riders of Kentucky have begun warfare on women. A band of masked men went to the home of Mrs. Martha Haynes, a widow, near Morgantown, Ky., early to-day, and commanded her to open the door. She refused, and they broke it down.

Rushing in, they seized the woman, dragged her to the yard, and while several men held her, others whipped her with bushes and switches until she was in a fainting condition. When the mob finally released Mrs. Haynes, she was more dead than alive, dragged herself back to her house, where she was found later by friends. She may not recover.

In the same neighborhood masked men, supposed to be members of the same gang, visited the home of "Curt" Johnson, broke down the door, dragged him out and beat him almost to death. Warrants have been issued for four men alleged to have been in the gang, but no arrests have been made.

Early in the week three women were dragged from their home in Carter County by night riders and badly beaten.

Her Summer clothes get more and more amazing. By Mrs. Cholly Knickerbocker. Will American women come to the flesh-colored tights, under-chiffons and stockings which smart Parisiennes are now wearing beneath scanty drapery? Each day shows dresses clinging more closely. See next Sunday's AMERICAN.

ORPHANS CAN'T SPEND ALL OF $457,000 FUND

Shaw Trustees Have So Much Money They Now Ask Right to Aid Widows.

Declaring that they have a great deal more money than they can wisely spend in aiding orphans created by the great loss of lives among Massachusetts fisherman and sailors, trustees of a fund of $400,000 left by the late Robert Gould Shaw, to-day filed a petition in the Superior Court seeking to have removed certain restrictions laid down in the will.

The fund was created in 1877 and provided for the support of all orphan children under ten years of age of any sailor or fisherman who lost his life from any vessel owned in whole or in part by a resident of this State.

Trustees of the fund some years ago purchased land for a home for the orphan children, in Brookline. They then found that there were not enough children under the provisions laid down to warrant building the home.

Shortly after this stage of the proceedings a petition was granted by the Superior Court removing the age limit as originally fixed, and the trustees were to spend money for the succor and aid of all orphans within restrictions as otherwise stated.

KETCHEL AND PAPKE TOO HUSKY FIGHTERS TO MEET ONLY TO A FINISH

NEW YORK, May 23.—Billy Delaney, the grand old manager of fighters, was the first one to pick Stanley Ketchel as a comer.

Last year when Bill called on me, he tipped the carrot-topped lad as the coming wonder, painting him in vivid colors.

"He has a style that will baffle the best of them and can hit the hardest punch I ever saw delivered, aside from the one Jack Dempsey packed. He fights sideways. When getting at his man's body he stands sideways and lets fly with both hands."

Delaney is the man who made both Corbett and Jeffries champions of the world and a word of boost from him was a grand thing.

Ketchel at that time was matched to fight Joe Thomas. He beat Thomas twice after that and Delaney's dope came true. Then he beat Mike (Twin) Sullivan to a punch, and the Twin, thinking it a fluke, had his big brother Jawn hooked up, and the same dose was fed the stouter Sully.

A great many are of the opinion that a short fight between Papke and Ketchel would be unsatisfactory. Both new middleweights are young fellows. Both are strong, aggressive and have the punch. They are built to go the route. Both are anxious to become great men in the boxing world and apparently eager to get together.

The only way to settle the argument would be a forty-five round contest or one to a finish and the only place they can pull off such a go would be in California.

Milwaukee is a good place to box, but goes are only ten rounds there and this is too short for a man like Ketchel and would probably end in a draw or a close decision.

Let's see these two great fighters in a finish go. Nevada or California clubs could cop a barrel of money with this card.

Divided as to Terry's Ability.

Terry McGovern's return to the ring was the talk of the town to-day and opinions were equally divided on the doings of the famous Brooklynite.

A great many seem to think that because Loughrey stayed the limit with Terry the latter is not there with the slam. That means nothing. Loughrey went the limit with young Packey McFarland and he fought Tommy Murphy a few times, making it so warm for the Harlem lad that at the finish no one could say just who had the better of it.

This was Terry's first go in many moons, you must remember. When Kid McCoy returned to the ring a few years ago, after a long rest, he said he felt as though he had never seen a glove before. He was scared to death, and for two rounds couldn't stand still without shaking. Terry must have been affected the same way. You know how you feel when you haven't been in a dentist's chair for a while. Let us wait a few weeks before we let out the big whoop about McGovern.

Star Lightweights Few.

Right at present there aren't so many world-beating lightweights. Joe Gans and Battling Nelson are the topnotchers. Of course, Battling beat Terry once, but that doesn't mean that they wouldn't put up a good go again. Let Terry have another chance, and then if the big six sign must go up, let it go. He had the better of Loughrey, who is seasoned and young, so what more do they want? Soup in their gravy?

In speaking of the recent go between Jem Bowker and Charley Griffin, a London sporting writer, says:

"As regards the fight itself it was terribly disappointing. Jem Bowker has deteriorated. A little over a year ago he had to strike his flag to Driscoll. Griffin, who guards his head with both hands, pokes his shoulder forward, and pushes his opponent about the ring, is a very awkward customer to land on. Jem could not hit with any force at all. In the third round Griffin hooked the right on the side of the head and dashed the left on the mark. It was then the fight was won.

"Bowker lasted for five more rounds, but he was in trouble during the whole period. He was not actually out even at the finish, but so utterly weary from the roughing he had experienced that he could not stand.

Griffin Has No Style.

"As a boxer Griffin is beneath contempt. Style is to him a word without meaning, but of strength he has a marvelous store. Personally, I do not think Bowker at his best would have beaten the New Zealander—and the little man was not at his best. Bowker was terribly cut up over his defeat, for he had been practically promised, in the event of winning, that he should have another go at Jim Driscoll, who had twice caused him to strike his flag."

NEW LEADERS FOR POINTS IN METS' SPEEDWAY RACES

New leaders came to the front in both the trotting and pacing divisions as the result of the last matinee on the Charles River speedway. Tom Phair, 2:14¼, Isaac Sexton's good trotter, and Vik's Sister, owned by J. E. Fitzgerald, superseding Chase, 2:07¼, in the contest for points won, though the last named still leads in heats and races to his credit, while for the pacers Minnie, the little roan mare belonging to H. B. Ralston, takes first place clear across the board in points, heats and races won, from Phoebon W.

Both Chase and Hills Boy have twelve points in the trotting division, while no less than five contestants are in a tie with eleven points. The pacers Mardel, Phoebon W., Colbath and Edith J. are tied in the number of points for second honors in this division, while four other pacers are right on their heels with twelve points each, making a very close race for the prizes offered for the Spring series of matinees.

Chase still holds the fastest single heat and race average for trotters, while Mardel has the fastest pacing race average and is tied with Phoebon W. in having won the fastest heat to date. Following is the standing of the horses having won eight or more points in the four matinees decided:

MANY FAMOUS DRIVERS IN MEET AT READVILLE

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Charles Basle, with the Flying Dutchman, has been matched to drive a ten mile race against Seymour, in the Christie front drive racer at the Bay State Auto Association meet on Memorial Day. This match brings together two of the most capable men in the motor game in this country, and insures the presence in this city on Memorial Day of perhaps the largest number of famous drivers that has ever been here, including Christie, Oldfield, Marriott, Stewart, Owen and Di Palma.

Seymour, who has been selected to drive the Christie car is the same man who made such an excellent showing with the Simplex in the recent Briarcliffe. It will be remembered that he was the second last man to get away in that contest and yet he drove so well that at one time he was in second position, and lost a place among the winners only in the last lap and then as the result of a tire puncture. He is a driver of ability, always cool and should make a good showing in his drive against Basle, the man who Barney Oldfield considers one of the most capable drivers in this country.

Seymour will not only drive the match race, but he will also go for the one mile world's track record, now held by the Christie machine, and which was created late last Fall. He will make two attempts for the record, the first being scheduled for Thursday afternoon next. He comes to Boston Wednesday just for the purpose of annexing the record.

Walter Christie, who made the world's record on the local track last year, will likewise be here, but not as a competitor. He will drive a five-mile exhibition with the Christie car.

* * *

While thousands of spectators lined the course at Algonquin Hill this week to witness the annual hill climb under the auspices of the Chicago Motor Club, another crowd of similar dimension was engaged in watching a Studebaker electric vehicle in an attempt to negotiate nine flights of stairs in the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago. That neither the Algonquin event nor the stair climb of the Studebaker was brought to an official finish caused much regret among motor enthusiasts who like to see things going up. The weather man was roasted roundly for his make-and-break type of atmospheric conditions at Algonquin, but this was nothing to the criticism heaped upon officials of the hotel who spoiled the fun at the lake front hostelry.

The convention of the National Electric Light Association was in session during the week, and 1,500 delegates had been promised an inspection of a Studebaker electric vehicle, appointed with everything electrical known in the industry. When the time came to deliver the vehicle to the exhibition hall on the ninth floor, however, the discovery was made that no elevator in the house would hold the carriage. Neither could the vehicle be elevated by block and tackle from the outside like a safe, for none of the windows was large enough to admit it.

Manager E. J. Kuhns of the Studebaker branch then decided to make the car climb the broad and comparatively easy stairway from the main lobby, and two flights had been negotiated, much to the amusement of the spectators when the management of the house objected to converting the famous hostelry into a hill climb course, and called the event off.

QUILL'S BOXING TO GET BIG TEST

There are a great many good judges around town who believe that Tommy Quill of Brockton is due for the surprise of his life when he goes against Young Erne of Philadelphia at the Armory Club Tuesday night.

The wonderful ring record of the Quaker City lad, coupled with the knowledge that Quill is the best lad of his weight in New England, has served to make the members of the club take more than passing notice of this meeting.

It is conceded that Erne is a much better boxer than Willie Fitzgerald, and although he may lack the hard hitting ability of the Harp, still he is so clever and has such a wonderful left hand that many figure that he will have the Brockton lad bewildered from the very start of the contest.

Even Quill's fondest admirers admit that Erne will have all the best of the first half of the twelve rounds, but they expect that Quill's great strength will be in evidence the last six rounds, and that Tommy will win in a way that will not need any decision from the referee.

Some great try-out bouts have been arranged, and the semi-final between Eddie Curtis and Young Alger ought to prove fast and fierce while these lads are at work.

HARVARD-YALE SHOOT TO-DAY.

THE KID—HIS FINISH IN A PAUPER GRAVE—BY TAD

"OH HE WAS SOME PRIZE FIGHTER I FORGET HIS NAME"
TAD

The LIFE OF A FIGHTER IN TEN CHAPTERS

BY TAD.

CHAPTER X.

He didn't last long, poor Kid. He drifted from one place to another after he was kicked out of the former manager's saloon. Up and down the Bowery he reeled like a ship without a rudder. He had no place to go. He went wherever he thought he could get a drink. No one knew the Kid now.

He was found in a doorway one cold morning by a policeman. He had sold his coat and was freezing to death. They took him to the station, and there they learned that the Kid was dying.

In two days he was dead, and as no one claimed his body he was buried in a pauper's grave with a little stick over him.

The grave digger remembered the spot. He knew that at one time the Kid was a fighter, because some one had mentioned it when his body was brought there. He didn't remember his name or what he had done, but he was a fighter.

"Some fighter; I don't remember his name."

He was a prince once when he was on top. When he lost his title he lost heart and all.

"He was a good fellow when he had it."

THE END.

BURNS MUST BOX OR QUIT

By Tad.

"Sidestepping Tommy" has about run his race in England. The King, the papers, the sports and the big betting men are "on," and he has to either fight or leave for other parts.

The Sportsman, the leading boxing paper in London, comments on the Johnson-Burns controversy in the following article:

> Tommy Burns has positively declined to meet Jack Johnson for the purse of £2,500 offered by the National Sporting Club, and followers of boxing are putting the question—"Is Burns afraid." His demand for £6,000, win, lose or draw, is ridiculed and laughed at. Johnson claims that it is a get-out on the part of Burns, a way of evading a meeting, and I must say this opinion is shared by many. The remarkable stipulation made by Burns only shows the difference between the game to-day and a few years back. Apparently we are behind the times in the matter of match-making, yet on the face of it a demand for a sum like £6,000, win, lose or draw, seems absolutely lunatic. The clause, too, has nothing like a sporting sound about it, and may be put down, as it has been more than once during the last few days, to a lack of confidence. Such a proviso has never previously been suggested in England, and I may here say that even if the National Sporting Club could give ten times the sum Burns asks for the purse could never be cut up in that way. This has been decided by the committee at headquarters.
>
> Both Burns and Johnson have been very prominent in print recently, and from what I have heard, not only in the club but on the race course and in sporting resorts generally, the black has come out on top. It hardly seems possible that Burns, who, according to the American press, has long been thirsting for the blood of the black, and who, in his own opinion, couldd knock spots off Johnson in double quick time, should miss this easy chance of picking up £4,000. The National have offered £2,500, of which they will award £2,000 to the winner. Burns scoffs at the idea of Johnson putting up £1,000, but I can assure him that the black can comand backing for twice the amount.

The following letter was printed in a London sporting paper and shows the feeling toward "Sidestepping Tommy":

> To the Editor of The Sportsman:
>
> Sir—I should think that other of the British sporting public besides myself must be getting tired of this American bluffing which is at the present time filling the sporting press. From the controversy at present existing between Burns and Johnson I am all the more convinced of our national blindness to these American methods, and I think it would be better if we "cut it all out" and asked these feather bed world's champions to return to their native heath, where the public understood better the "soft soap" so readily given by the American boxing fraternity.
>
> I have read the letters appearing in the press from Tommy Burns, but up to the present I have not seen an explanation of the fact that in all Burn's previous encounters in this country no difficulty was found in finding a suitable purse to satisfy the world's champion's swollen-head cravings; yet as soon as a man with any pretensions to the title arrives on the scene Burns's head swells to such an extent as immediately to render it impossible for a match to be pulled off. There is your champion! The man that has been picking up our gold in sacks shows us that when put to the real test he is found lamentably wanting.

Owen Moran is the latest scrapper to put upon a money bar against tought nuts in his profession. Across the pond they want Owen to mingle with Jem Driscoll, but he stalls around, saying he will not fight unless an immense sum is given him, win, lose or draw. One London expert, in writing on the subject, says:

> Owen Moran has been piling up dollars in America, and I fear he has also acquired some of the objectionable characteristics of the Yankee bluffers. When the Brum gave it out that he would not fight in this country until he had decided his recent match with Attel, we could all understand his attitude, especially as he can take up lucrative music hall engagements on the other side if he should defeat the American. However, there exists a very keen dsire to see Moran in the ring with Jim Driscoll, and the Cardiff youth is prepared with backing up to £200. (I dare say more could be raised without difficulty.) In two quarters a purse of £1,000 is forthcoming, and great hopes were entertained that the National Sporting Club would secure the match for Derby week. Moran, however, has imitated Tommy Burns, and requires £600, win, lose or draw. Driscoll will, sensibly, have nothing to do with such preposterous terms. It is just on the cards, however, that John Summers will return fro mthe States and take on Driscoll for £200 and the N. S. C. purse. In the meantime I would warn Moran and others that they are going the right way to disgust the public with the game, and thereby render it impossible for promoters to offer decent purses.

HARD TO GET OLYMPIC CREW

NEW YORK, May 23.—President James Pilkington of the N. A. A. O. was on the river yesterday and was pretty hot over a report that the idea of sending an eight to the Olympic regatta had been abandoned for want of funds.

"This report is news to me," said Mr. Pilkington. "Why, we are more troubled over getting a crew of good men together. We can get lots of men, but we want out and out good ones, that is, a crew with a chance to win, not like some of the crews which have gone there before and some of the dub scullers who were a disgrace to American rowing."

A small item about the English Olympic crew has reached here from the other side. Peter Dewar, of the London R. C., is now the stroke. He deposed R. B. Etherington Smith, the old Cantab. J. S. Burn, of this year's Cambridge crew, had seat No. 6, but his place has been given to R. H. Sanderson, another Cambridge man.

BINJOLLA IN TRAINING FOR STAKE RACES

Walter J. Bates of Dorchester has in preparation at Readville track one he owns that looks good enough to be heard from at the top of race summaries this year in the stallion Binjolla, 2:17¾, which has been entered in several of the most important trotting stakes in the Grand Circuit, including the $50,000 American Trotting Derby, Charter Oak $10,000 event, etc.

Last season Jack Trout worked Binjolla over the Charles River speedway miles right in 2:12, and later he raced well over the half-mile tracks. If all goes well the son of Bingen should have a record in the Fall around 2:07 or 2:08.

Mr. Bates has a two-year-old pacing filly by Glencoe Wilkes, out of Eva W., 2:24½, that can speed a runaway gait with the limited training she has received. Bob Proctor says that she will beat 2:15 this year to a certainty. Another in the stable is Walter Bingen, the same age as the filly, and he will be worked along for his futurity engagements in 1909.

A recent arrival to the track is A. G. Marchant, who has three from the Walnut Hill Farm, Greenbush, he will develop for racing and records.

Bosun, by Alkalone, 2:14½, the pacing gelding that for two seasons has been capable of beating 2:10, is again being worked by Millard Drinkwater, and it is said will hear the word this year in the races.

Trainer Fred Hyde is at the track with the Hubinger string of six head and a running pacemaker. Axcyell, 2:00¼, and Mae Heart, 2:10¼, are the record members of the string. Both are in fine condition, and Fred has stepped Mae Heart a mile in 2:22, which is the season's track record for Readville.

TERRY AFTER BALDWIN NEXT

NEW YORK, May 23.—Terry McGovern has settled down at Johnson's roadhouse to hard work for his fight with Spike Robson, which is scheduled to take place Tuesday night of next week before the National A. C. of America. The former champion has been doing light work for a week, but beginning this afternoon he will box nine fast rounds each day with Charles Griffin, the Australian champion; Bant Dorsey and Frankie Madden, taking on each for a three-round spin.

McGovern expects to be in magnificent shape Tuesday and show much better form that he exhibited at Philadelphia last week. In boxing this afternoon he will use chest pads and head gear in order to wade in and fight hard for speed and stamina. He is counting on winning this battle and then signing to meet Matty Baldwin.

CLUBS TO RACE FOUR MATINEES

The Quannapowitt Driving Club and the Gentlemen's Driving Club of Lynn have arranged to hold a series of four intercity race meetings, two meetings to take place at Reading track on Saturdays, June 6 and August 8, and two return meetings to be held at Rockdale Park, Peabody, on Saturdays, July 11 and September 12.

There is keen rivalry between these two clubs and the meetings should be replete with interesting racing.

BRADY SAYS JEFF BEAT LANKY BOB TWICE IN BOUT AT CONEY ISLAND

"Not many persons know it, but Jim Jeffries licked Bob Fitzsimmons twice at Coney Island and did a good job both times," declared W. A. Brady.

"I know he did it, because I saw both scraps from beginning to end, and if Fitzsimmons does not verify what I say I'll buy the dinners, cherry and all trimmings any time and any place you indicate.

"You may not know it, but all fighters, those even in the championship class, have a wide streak of yellow running from the roots of the hair to the end of the spine and then it branches off like a divided skirt and continues down both legs to the heel-way, and defies ordinary treatment to efface from the system.

"They all have it, big and little fighters alike. No one is too gigantic not to be overcome with the fear of a single punch that will end his money-making career as a fighter. And Jeffries was no exception to the rule. Hence it was that I had to get rid of it before he and the speckled one met for their fight at Coney Island in 1899.

"Jeffries was the greatest fighter that ever lived. He was the strongest man that ever donned gloves in a ring, and he had the widest streak down his back that I have ever seen. He was terribly afraid of Fitzsimmons and cried before it was time to enter the ring, and did everything possible to seek an excuse to dodge the fight. He was afraid he was going to be licked.

"Jeffries was lying on a cot in the pavilion. You never saw such a sight in your life. There he was, just as weak as a child from fear, and the greatest development of muscles in evidence that you ever saw. He was trained to the minute and the finest specimen of physical perfection I ever looked upon, but almost a mental wreck. Nothing but the thought of mobbing ever kept him in control until I framed up a job that gave him courage to go into the ring and clean up Fitzsimmons.

"I had counseled with a personal friend and we concocted the scheme of telling Jeffries that Fitzsimmons was very superstitious, that he had a fear of everything out of the ordinary before he entered the ring, and that he would simply not fight if he stumbled over a screen before a fight. We decided to make him stumble. I took Jeffries out for a stroll along the board walk, while I had a large screen taken to the dressing room. After we returned I had Jeffries strip as bare as when he first came into the world.

"In accordance with our agreement, and I must say that Jeffries would do exactly as he was told, he raised a row about hitting in clinches. This gave me a chance to go to Julian and try to get together on it. I ended the matter by saying to Martin: 'These men are the ones who are to fight to-night; let them settle it themselves. Jeffries is in his dressing room; let Fitzsimmons go in and talk it over. Whatever they say goes.'

"Julian fell for the bait and agreed. Fitzsimmons came into the dressing room to meet Jeffries. Oh, what a sight it was. There he was, Jeffries, the biggest fighter that ever lived, not a stitch of clothes on him and the muscles of his stomach and breast standing out like the limbs of an ordinary man.

Fitzsimmons looked sick at once. I saw it, and before the argument had gone far Jeffries leaped up from his resting board, punched Fitzsimmons on the jaw and sent him sprawling to the floor, over the screen, down and out for the count.

"Of course Jeffries won the fight. He went into the ring and pounded the life out of Fitzsimmons because the speckled one had been scared to death first by the sight of such a physical giant and second by the punch. To add to the misery there was the screen. I never even told Jeffries about the job I put up. He thought it was the superstition about the screen that enabled him to lick Fitzsimmons so easily. But it is all in the game."

FRANK FOX HAS BIGGEST STABLE AT COMBINATION

By Ed. Cogswell.

That there is more than one racetrack in the vicinity of the State House well worth the attention of visiting horsemen and railbirds on a Tuesday and Friday workout of the horses is proved by taking the short trip out to Combination Park. Ten trainers have located there this Spring, making the course a very busy place from early till late.

Already a pacer has stepped the track in 2:18, half in 1:07½, which leads in point of speed over any of the other tracks in the whole State up to date. This fact of the mile in 2:18 can only be fully determined, however, unless one crosses his throat three times, saying "hope to die," and has his other hand over his heart, as the feat is a BIG SECRET. This is because the pacer is to be turned loose for the pool box in the meeting at Montreal next month.

Frank Fox has the biggest string at the track, some twenty-two in all, the fastest by records being My Star, 2:03¾; Aintree, 2:10¼; Gloria, 2:10¼; Frank S., 2:08¼; Ed. Wilkes, 2:13½; Northern Spy, 2:15½; Louise E., 2:14¾; Emma N., 2:17¼, and Grace Maud, 2:18¼.

Ed. Wilkes the Tipped Pacer.

Ed Wilkes, while not having the best mark, is looked upon as quite the most likely to bring home the biggest pot of money during the season of any in the stable. He is the property of Jerry Sullivan of Brighton and could beat 2:10 quite a little last year.

Northern Spy was the best winner out of Maine last season. His sturdy campaign marked him as a horse capable of going to the races at the initial tap of the bell and remaining busy till time to hang the sulkies on the nail in the Fall.

Ed. Ireland has a nice stable of horses, the property of M. L. Bryson of West Newton and S. A. Frost of Fremont, N. H. This is his first season from Maine, but in that State he made a name for himself as a clever trainer and driver. His string at Combination comprises Dr. Band, 2:15¼; Pointer Patchen, 2:16¼; Guy F., 2:19¼; Prince Alfondly, 2:22¼, and a number of promising green ones.

"Whitey" Crowley should secure his share of the purses with the trotters and pacers he is handling. Mary M., 2:21¼, will get the word this season pacing, and is counted much faster than when trotting. Some of the others in the stable are Ashland Bett, 2:21¼, that Fred H. Bellows is racing at Charles River speedway, and will later take to the half-mile tracks; Lord Abbott, Nero, Stanley Mack, Lady Wilkes, etc.

Bailey Searching 'Em Out.

Charley Bailey is searching out a number, including Montana Girl, 2:17¼; Douglas Direct, Maud Graham and a few others without records. J. C. LaRock is getting Botany, 2:17¾, and the trotter J. C. L., ready for the races. George Davis has a couple of good ones in Argot Lad, 2:20½, and Autobon, 2:27.

Manager Charley Lockwood of the park is preparing for A. M. Newbert to campaign the pacing mare Edith R., 2:20¼, and for himself to race Johnny Wilkes, 2:17¾; Rowena, 2:22¼; and some promising green ones. C. Tootbaker has one in King's Heir, a pacer, that has been in 2:20 this year, and is being prepared for a trip on the cars soon.

Knapp Forshner has Doncella, 2:16¼; Hills Boy, 2:22¼, that goes to Readville sale next week; Silver Wilkes, 2:23¼, a very fast trotter with perfect manners, and three others of merit.

Fred Rideout is getting ready for his trip through the Vermont and Eastern Canada Circuit with Daisy Belle, 2:21¼; Delia Ray, 2:22¾; Rosamond, 2:21¾; the fast trotting mare Somosa, by Bingen, that is being staked in the green classes through the circuit named, and Paul Sidney that goes on a trot.

Several more trainers are expected to arrive at the track shortly, but the ones named to keep the clock busy on workout days. It is being talked that about fifteen of the horses will be shipped to the Montreal meeting, three or four of the trainers taking a hand in gaining a share of the purses.

JEFF HOPES TO SIGN PACKY

LOS ANGELES, May 23.—If James J. Jeffries is able to carry out his good intentions, the third attraction to be offered by his club at Vernon will be a twenty-five-round fight between Packy McFarland and the winner of the Broeck-Freddie Walsh battle which takes place on the afternoon of Memorial Day.

MAYER'S BIG STRING.

At the Back Bay Alleys, Frank W. Mayer broke the single string score of the alleys by rolling 158. Up to this time Dave O'Brien held it with 151.

BASEBALL BROWNS MEET RED SOX AGAIN BOXING BRITONS ARE TIRED OF BURNS ATHLETICS

NO WONDER O'CONNOR CAN WIN AT PINOCHLE

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

There will be no scarcity of ice in St. Louis this Summer if Jack O'Connor, the old-time catcher, is still with the Browns when the hot weather sets in. Jack carries enough ice on his fingers to supply the entire population of the Missouri city through an unusually dry season.

Boldly displayed on the third finger of Jack's horny left hand are three of the largest diamonds ever seen in captivity. When Jack plays two-handed pinochle, which game requires the lifting of a card from the deck every time a trick is taken, these three pieces of ice send forth flashes that simply blind his opponent. Hence Mr. O'Connor is uniformly successful at the game.

Jack calls his biggest diamond "Cy Young." It rivals in brilliancy the famous Koh-i-Noor, which, as is well known, was once in the possession of that highly original and sybaritic Indian potentate, the Great Mogul, and which now rests in the crown of England.

The next largest piece of ice in Mr. O'Connor's collection is a perfect monster, which he calls "Patsy Tebeau." It is a dead ringer for the celebrated Orloff diamond, which, as is also well known, was purchased by Count Orloff at Amsterdam in 1776 for Catherine II. of Russia. Once the eye of an idol at Seringapatam in Mysore, it now graces the diadem of the Czar, but it has nothing on "Patsy."

The last, but not least, flasher that Mr. O'Connor carries with him would be pronounced by connoisseurs to be none other than the famous Regent were it not for the fact that the old backstop assures everyone that the Regent was recently seen in the Galeree d'Apallon in the Louvre.

Mr. O'Connor has named this lump of congealed water "Chief Zimmer."

Mr. O'Connor had a habit when catching a game of ball to shun the water tank entirely from the time he went on the field until the game ended. Then he would repair to the nearest spigot and consume four gallons of water without stopping to breathe.

Keep your eye on that sterling box youngster, McQuillen of the Phillies. If McQuillen is not the king-pin of all young boxmen, he is seemingly, at least, the best brought out since last Fall by the National League. His record with Billy Murray is truly great. He proved his cleverness by defeating Overall of Chicago. The big Chicagoan had not tasted of defeat since August 7 last. Counting his victory over Detroit in the world's series last Fall he had put together fifteen successive victories. McQuillen pitched rings around Overall and made him quit at the end of the fourth inning. McQuillen's record with the Phillies to date is grand. He performed in four games in the windup of last year's campaign and made a clean sweep. He got off this season with a defeat, due largely to poor support in the opening game. Since then McQuillen has put together seven victories in a row. Four of the triumphs have been by a single run. He has not allowed more than seven hits in any game. Here is his record:

Has Christy Mathewson lost his cunning? This is a question that is undoubtedly worrying Manager McGraw of the Giants, and Christy's last three games display the fact that he is not the Christy of old. He has been chased to the bench in all of the games he has pitched on this Western trip, and the New York papers even are getting in line with the belief that this is about his last year as a major leaguer, and as Christy has a goodly bunch of the long green laying in some Gotham bank, they also believe that he will retire from baseball rather than drift to the minors. Christy, however, is of a different opinion.

"I have just as much as I ever had and I am confident that I will win the majority of my games this season," said Matty. "I have had some tough luck lately, but I will get going right in a few days and I will convince these wiseacres that I am still to be counted upon."

FORFEITS UP FOR LONG BOUT ON THE COAST

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—When the articles of agreement for the Gans-Nelson forty-five round battle were being made, the Dane was speeding on his way to Seattle to clinch a match with Kid Scaler. Nelson was to get $3,000 win, lose or draw. A message from Willus Britt, who is managing the Battler, intercepted Nelson euroute, and the Dane made haste to return to this city.

Last night, Ben Selig, representing Gans, deposited a forfeit for $2,500 with Stakeholder Clark and Willus Britt for the Battler also sent a check. Gans will go to Harbin Springs for two weeks, returning to Shannon's to resume his training prior to the fight.

Sam Berger is endeavoring to sign Abe Attell and Packy McFarland for twenty rounds for his June date to weigh 133 ringside. McFarland is willing to make 132 at 3 o'clock, but will not listen to ringside weight.

Notes of the Harness Horses

Rob Thompson will race the pacing mare Outcast, 2:18¾, later in the season, R. C. Spencer of Newton having bought a half-interest in her and placed her in the Brighton man's charge.

Knapp Forshner has bought the Medford House Stables and will conduct a livery and sale business, besides running his public training stable at Combination Park.

Now they say that Eddie Rice will not send his crack pacer The Friend, 2:05¼, to Andy McDowell, but Ed Sunderlin gets him. The best way to tell who gets the pacer to train and race is to wait till the horse has arrived in the person's string.

They are naming horses Merry Widow, which is likely after the waltz and not the hats, for when the racing season gets in full swing many the trainer will believe owners should have dubbed their horses with some such title as demonstrated by the handy way they will dance the money away.

It was reported that George Webb of Philadelphia bought the trotter Robert Mac, 2:08¾, for a Boston man, but the story comes, too, from Philadelphia that the horse belongs to Connelly and Shotwell of that city.

George P. King of Worcester has sold to N. E. Hackett, Phillips, Me., a young stallion by Wilkes, out of a mare by Oakland Baron, 2:09¼.

The trotting record for the Fellsway Driving Club at Mystic Park is now tied at 31 seconds, both George C. and Norvet having won a heat in that time.

One of the hardest horses to beat in his class over the Franklin Field speedway is the veteran Captain Hall. When the time gets around 31 he has to be counted in the figuring. It is pleasing to the spectators to see the old horse win, too, as he has participated in the matinees of the Dorchester Driving Club since its early races, nine years ago.

Joseph Beaudry, Jr., of Worcester, has bought of J. J. Culliney, of the same city, the trotting gelding Othmar, 2:19½, that gained his record over the Saugus track in 1902. He will be used in the driving club's races.

The easy way in which E. S. Morse can win heats with his pacer Billy Wilkes, in time around 32½, would make it seem that were some side wheeler to take him by the head for the length of the Franklin Field course he would show the crowd some tall stepping.

Among the latest arrivals at Rockdale Park is James E. O'Brien, who has a stable of six, headed by the trotting mare Rose Mack, 2:18½, and the speedy trotting stallion Afridi, trial in 2:17.

Henry Titus has been a mile in 2:40 with the futurity candidate Feros, brother of Blue Hill (2), 2:15¾, and he was simply jogging.

After a year's absence from the trotting horse Mertie Page, the well-known trainer and driver, has opened a public training stable at Rockdale Park.

The Gentlemen's Driving Club of Lynn will start their matinee season on May 30 and continue every Saturday afternoon and holidays until Thanksgiving Day.

Invader, 2:10, is the champion trotter of the New York speedway; in fact, the gelding has held the honor for the past three seasons. It is the idea in Boston that Chase, 2:07¼, would put it over the New York champion were the two to meet for the laurels of their respective cities. Possibly the New Yorkers may think differently, and if so, let a match race be arranged, or a series of races, to decide the better speedway trotters.

Dynamiters recently attempted to blow up the costly residence of George D. Sherman in Port Henry, N. Y., a heavy charge of the explosive having been placed near the front of the well-known horseman's dwelling, and when discharged tore off the piazza and broke all of the windows.

Billy Andrews and Andy McDowell hold jointly the track record for the season at Poughkeepsie in 2:17¼ with Sweet Marie, 2:02, and Ethan Roberts, 2:04¼. The former is in preparation for her start in the $5,000 free-for-all at Readville July 4, which means that Andrews will not be seen behind Sonoma Girl, 2:05¼, in the race here. Ethan Roberts has been rigged by McDowell so he doesn't pull when at speed like last season when in Trainer Snow's charge.

McHenry's contract with James Farley stipulates that he shall not drive horses wearing hopples. One of Farley's string is the pacer Judex, 2:06¼, with the panjama habit, and Farley intends driving him himself. Being a "strike-breaker," a little thing like driving a hoppled pacer looks like amusement to Farley.

SANDY HAS BOUTS AHEAD

Offers for the services of Sandy Ferguson are pouring in fast to the big fellow's manager. Yesterday four were received by him, but that which the Armory A. A. made was the only one that received consideration. A proposition from the representative of some New York sporting men for Sandy to meet Sam McVey and two other heavyweights in Paris was received. If a substantial guarantee is put up on this side Ferguson and his manager are ready to leave, but they are taking no chances with the promoters in gay Paree unless something of that sort is done.

A club at Bridgeport and another in New York want to use Ferguson immediately. They want him in Bridgeport with Jim Barry, while the Longacre of New York is ready to put him on with Jim Stewart. Sandy will go to Northboro, Mass., at once, and there get in shape before tackling any more jobs. It will be three weeks at least before Sandy exhibits anywhere.

YOUNG AND CARDIO STILL LEADERS IN BIG CONTEST

Few changes mark the voting in the past twenty-four hours in the BOSTON AMERICAN Baseball Contest for the most popular professional and amateur players, Laporte moving ahead of McHale in the professional standing and Curran taking a position above Brophy in the amateur ranks being the only alterations to record.

Cardio stood still, not a coupon having turned up for him in the mails. This permitted Broders to make a pretty gain on the leader. Curran, too, received a nice complimentary attention from his admirers. Cogan just managed to top the thousand list, making him nearly a hundred coupons ahead of Mulvey, the amateur next to him in the rating. Following is the standing to date:

FIGHTERS DO NOT COME BACK; TERRY AN EXAMPLE

Terry McGovern, once known as the most terrible of all until a young man known as Corbett punched his aspirations full of holes, tried the feat of "coming back" at Philadelphia Saturday night, and his attempt must be put down as an absolute failure.

He essayed to whip Tommy Loughrey in six rounds, a feat that was none too easy for Packey McFarland but a short time back. Terry stuck to the finish and was greedy, seemingly, for the work in front of him, but he didn't do much to Loughrey.

He knocked the Eastern lad down once cleanly, but was himself floored toward the end of the affair and finished in tired and wobbly condition, an indication that despite his hard training he has found it next to impossible to get into any sort of condition.

Loughrey Better Man.

Some writers naturally give Terry credit for putting up an excellent battle and claim that he had the shade over Loughrey, but a consensus of the reports indicates that Loughrey proved the better man at the sprinting distance of six rounds and that, had the battle been a longer one, Terry undoubtedly would have been forced to take the count.

Terry's case is hopeless, no matter how Joe Humphrey and his other friends may argue to the contrary. It is not the first time McGovern has been tried out with the idea that he may be as good to-day as he was before Corbett rammed his right onto the jaw and put him out of the running as featherweight champion.

Terry was matched with Jimmy Britt in New York not so far back and made a fair showing in a ten-round contest that might or might not have been on the level as far as Britt was concerned. He also was pitted against Battling Nelson. In neither of these contests did he show that careful training would set him right again.

Terry's wild life, consistent with his wild career in the ring, has told on the boy, and he never again will be able to fit himself for the strenuous proceedings called for by ring engagements. Terry hasn't the brain necessary, and the brain is a bigger factor in the pugilist's life than the layman supposes.

In these days a man must be fighting all the time. A year's idleness kills most of them and leaves them easy victims when they attempt to class up with the bright ones of the ring.

GLIDDEN BEAT ALL RECORDS IN BALLOON TRIPS

LONDON, May 23.—Charles J. Glidden says that he has smashed all amateur balloon records within a week. He says he made five ascensions in five days, going 345 miles, and that he is coming home soon and do some ballooning with members of the Aero Club of New England. Mr. Glidden said to-day: "I have broken all amateur balloon records within a week. I made a balloon ascension for five consecutive days, starting from London, and my balloon travelled 345 miles in all. On my last voyage I crossed the Duke of Marlborough's castle. I was unable to make a number of ascents in Paris, but decided to do so here, so that I could get a pilot's license before starting for America. I shall sail within a few days."

GILLIS WILL BE IN OLYMPICS

NEW YORK, May 23.—Word reached here yesterday from Simon P. Gillis, the hammer thrower of the New York Athletic A. C., that he had left Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, for England, where he will compete in the English championships and afterward in the Olympic games. In fact he will be the first of the American team to reach English soil.

For the last two years or so Gillis has been a resident of Rio de Janeiro, being in the employment of the Light & Power Company, a New York concern. He will defray his own expenses to England and will travel by way of Portugal, Spain and France, arriving in England a couple of weeks before the championship, which takes place on July 4.

MURPHY-SHEPPARD DRAW.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Jerry Murphy of Indianapolis and Lon Sheppard of New York fought a good hard draw at the New Polo A. C. in Harlem.

THOMAS CAR OFF IN RACE AGAIN

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—Except that the Thomas car in the New York & Paris automobile race has finally got off from Vladivostok with a sufficient quantity of gasoline in its tank to carry it to the next supply point, nothing is definitely known concerning the progress the tourists are making.

The messages received here thus far do not indicate whether or not the Zust and Protos cars left with the Thomas. It is known there was an agreement that none should start until all were supplied with fuel and that the trio should then depart together.

The absence of any reference to the German and Italian autos suggests a change in plan, however, the Americans having evidently provided themselves with gasoline and perhaps decided to wait no longer for their rivals.

Though military commanders in the country through which the cars must pass have orders to keep an eye on the racers, news of almost impassable roads and the prevalence of brigands give ground for much uneasiness.

WALCOTT TO BOX SAWYER.

Belfield Walcott of this city and Dave Sawyer of Rockland, Me., are matched to meet in Dover, N. H., Monday night. Both are in good shape and each has agreed to report in Dover on Sunday afternoon.

BRIGGS MEETS DOHERTY.

Jimmy Briggs, who surprised the close followers of boxing by his remarkable work against Willie Fitzgerald in Bridgeport Thursday night, will meet Jeff Doherty of New Haven for twelve rounds in the Elm City June 5. Briggs will resume training to-day for the match.

HARVARD WON AT LACROSSE.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Harvard's lacrosse team defeated Columbia on South Field by a score of 10 goals to nothing.

P. F. Travers of the Nashua, N. H., team broke the world's record at duck-pin rolling in the individual class of the National Duck and Candlepin Congress at the Boylston alleys with 382, and the No. 7 team, representing the Casino alleys, rolled 1,590, another world's record.

WIFE AND BABE LEFT WITHOUT FOOD OR FUNDS

Charlestown Man Held in Jail While Little Family Faces Starvation.

CHILD CRIES OF HUNGER

Alone in her little home at No. 100 Henley street, Charlestown, with her fifteen months old baby, without either funds or food, her husband held in jail on a charge of larceny, Mrs. Charles Davis does not know which way to turn in order to secure enough to eat until Monday when her husband's trial comes up and when, she declares, he will be set free.

The heartbroken woman refuses to believe the charges against her husband, but she is forced to give way to tears when she thinks of him behind the prison bars.

Her only hope now is in her little son Harold, and it is a pathetic picture to see this tot trying to comfort his mother in its own childish way, patting her cheeks and brushing the tears away and trying, oh so hard to talk—to say what he will do when he is a man.

But the little home which the accused man has struggled so long in a vain effort to keep together will soon be a thing of the past unless some of those whom he has assisted in the past come to his rescue, in this, his hour of need.

Still Loyal to Husband.

Mrs. Davis, the young and pretty wife whose devotion to her husband has withstood the stern accusations of the United States marines who claim that he is guilty of the larceny of fifty-five pounds of brass from the Charlestown Navy Yard, when seen by a reporter said:

"Charlie is not guilty of this crime, I am sure; on this I will stake my life. My husband has always been most loving to me and a most kind father to our child. He was a teamster and was employed by Patrick O'Riordan.

"We have been married for the past three years and have one child, Harold, aged fifteen months, who, thank God, is not old enough to know anything of this matter.

Baby Cried for Food.

"All I know of the matter is that Charlie came home at his usual hour and later went out to see a friend. The next thing I knew of it was when a messenger came to me and told me of his arrest.

"Charlie has not been working for the last seven months, and our small amount of savings have dwindled away like water. We owe for five weeks' rent, but our landlord, John Mullet, has been most kind and has not said a word about the matter.

"But when Baby Harold, who is now fifteen months old, cried for food, I suppose Charlie could not stand it any longer, and, if what they say is true, he did it to buy food for the baby.

"He has never been arrested before, does not drink and has always been a strict church member. I hope that they will send him home to me and the baby so that our little home will not be broken up."

FRIENDS HONOR ALEX. M'GREGOR AT BANQUET

Pictures of a glowing future in public life for Alexander McGregor of the firm of Houghton & Dutton, could he be induced to enter politics, were drawn by the various speakers at a complimentary dinner tendered him at the Hotel Somerset last night. The dinner was given by Councillor Walter S. Glidden of Somerville, an old friend of Mr. McGregor's, and in whose cause the popular business man did yeoman work in the celebrated Cox-Glidden councillor fight last Fall, despite the fact that "Boss" Cox of Mr. McGregor's own city of Malden was the opposing candidate.

Despite the fact that the dinner was without political significance, being simply a compliment by Mr. Glidden to an old friend, several men high in the politics of the State were present, and Mr. McGregor found himself mentioned for various offices, including the mayoralty of Malden and representative from the Seventh Congressional District.

Among those present were former Governor John L. Bates, Courtenay Guild, brother of the Governor; Quartermaster-General Edward Glines of the Governor's staff, John F. Crocker, former president of the Chamber of Commerce; Mayor Charles L. Grimmons of Somerville, former Senators Joshua B. Holden and Charles H. Innes, John A. Campbell, former president of the Colonial Club; Colonel Thomas F. Taff, Augustus B. Seeley of Marshfield, John Shepard of the Shepard Norwell Company, Senator Charles L. Dean, Colonel Sidney O. Bigney, Alfred E. Hughes, secretary of the Fourth Councillor District Committee, former Representative James N. Thompson, former Alderman George Holden Tinkham, Hugh G. Brown, president of the Hotel and Railroad News Company, and Jeremiah J. McCarthy, surveyor of the port.

The "red room," in which the banquet was held at an oval table, was decorated with American flags, and an orchestra played during the dinner. Surveyor McCarthy presided at the postprandial exercises and introduced the host and special guest of the evening. The speakers all praised Mr. McGregor for his brilliant success as a business man and united in urging him to enter public life, as being the kind of man needed in politics.

DISCHARGED AND ARRESTED AGAIN

HARTFORD, Ct., May 23.—When the case of Thomas B. Missett of Springfield, Mass., held here on a charge of being a suspicious character in connection with the alleged theft of $30 from Miss Ruth Schultze of Springfield, came up to-day he was released, but was rearrested by Inspector Boyle of the Springfield police, who had requisition papers. Holden, however, said he would apply for a writ of habeas corpus, and as the statute allows twenty-four hours, Missett was sent back to jail.

WIFE OF CHARLES DAVIS AND 16-MONTHS-OLD SON HUNGRY AND PENNILESS

SAYS SHE FOUND HADLEY WILL ON DOORSTEP

English Woman Sends New Document, Giving Her Share of Estate, to Hub.

THREE WILLS IN EXISTENCE

Although the will of the late Benjamin F. Hadley of Somerville has already been filed at East Cambridge, two new wills, leaving the estate largely to relatives in England, have been discovered, and will probably be filed to-day. Captain Robert R. Perry of the Somerville police department, who was one of the witnesses to the first will, doubts the authenticity of the second one.

The chief beneficiary under Hadley's original will is little Rena Pritchard Hadley, daughter of Mrs. Emma Pritchard Hadley of No. 24 Hawthorn street, East Somerville. Mrs. (Dr.) Buckley, who was Elizabeth Moore, widow, of No. 12 Castle street, Trowbridge, Wiltshire, England, appears in both second and third wills as chief beneficiary.

Mrs. Buckley says that she found the second will underneath the doorstep of her home. She also says she was an adopted daughter of the late Benjamin Hadley.

The second will has two codicils, the first of which, according to Attorney Farrell, executor of the will now on file, has not been properly made out, having only two witnesses. The second codicil, properly constructed, with three witnesses, was sent here after the English claimants had been informed of the defect in the first.

The third will is in the hands of John H. Hinkley, lawyer, of No. 101 Tremont street.

A bequest which appears in both the new wills gives $10,000 to the President of the "States" of America, which "Benn Hadley, or Radleigh, champion miser of America," requests be used for charity.

THREE MONTHS IN JAIL FOR STEALING OWN SON

DORCHESTER WOMAN PROSECUTES EX-HUSBAND FOR KIDNAPPING.

For kidnapping his own eight-year-old child Walter, after the court had awarded its custody to the mother, Allan S. McLean of No. 28 Williams street, Medford, was found guilty of contempt of court by Judge Fox in the Suffolk Superior Court and sentenced to three months in jail.

Mrs. Fred O. Keinarde of No. 13 Everett avenue, Dorchester, McLean's divorced wife, who has since remarried, was the complainant. She charged McLean with kidnapping the boy from her home at No. 12 Dorr street, Roxbury, on Sunday, August 6, 1905, eight months after she secured her divorce from him, at which time she was given custody of the child, the father being allowed to see it every other Sunday.

The boy is now at McLean's parents' home at Inverness, Nova Scotia.

Willing to Return Boy.

In passing the sentence Judge Fox said: "The contempt in this case is gross. I believe the father's act in taking this child away from the mother was wanton and intentional and for the purpose of doing her injury. He admits that he has not seen the child for over two years."

Judge Fox then sentenced McLean, with the provision that if the child is immediately restored to the mother the sentence may be shortened.

"If he doesn't cause the child to be restored I don't think the powers of this court are exhausted at the end of the three months' sentence, if he should serve all of it," the judge added.

The boy will probably be turned over to the mother within a few days, as McLean stated on the stand in answer to the judge's questions that he was willing to return the boy.

Mrs. Keinarde the child's mother, was the first witness. "I secured a divorce from Mr. McLean, my former husband, in December, 1905, on the ground that he was unfaithful," she testified.

"The court awarded me custody of our five-year-old son Walter and ordered my husband to pay me $5 a week alimony, with the further provison that my husband might see the child every other Sunday as long as he paid the alimony.

"I complied with the court's order at all times, never refusing to allow my former husband to see the child. In the Summer of 1905 I moved from the home of my sister-in-law, Mrs. Chappell, to Dorr street, Roxbury.

"On the first Sunday in August of that year my former husband called at the new address and asked to take Walter for a sail to Nantasket Beach. I allowed him to take the boy, thinking it would do the child good to have an ocean sail. Mr. McLean promised to have the boy back home by six o'clock that evening. He did not return at six.

"I waited until eleven o'clock and then it dawned on me that he had probably stolen the boy. As the result of his failure to bring the boy back I went into hysterics that night.

Broke Down While Testifying.

"In company with a lady friend I went into the city the next day to make inquiries, hoping to find my child, but learned nothing. When I got home that night I suffered a nervous collapse and was in a critical condition for some time.

"I was ill for two months and have been in poor health ever since, because of my failure to get my child. I have not seen my boy since his father took him away three years ago (at this point Mrs. Keinarde broke down and wept).

"I didn't know just where the boy was until two days ago.

"I don't believe it was because of affection for the boy that my former husband took him away; I believe it was for the purpose of punishing me. A short time before he took the child away he said to a friend of mine: 'If I wanted to finish Jennie, all I would have to do is to take Walter away.'"

SAVE CREW OF SHIP WRECKED ON DREAD BAR

PROVINCETOWN, May 23.—Pounding to pieces on the outer bar off Highland Light, the three-masted schooner, Mary L. Crosby of Belfast, Me., will probably be a total loss, but Captain W. J. Atwood and crew were rescued by the life-savers of Nauset station, who risked their lives to reach the stranded vessel.

The vessel was bound from Belfast, Me., to New York, and while rounding Cape Cod last evening, was caught in the swift tide and struck the bar about 7:30 o'clock. The life-saver who was patrolling the beach saw rockets shooting up into the air from a craft dimly visible about half a mile off shore. This was a signal of distress. He gave the alarm to Captain Walker of the station, and the life-savers were ordered to man the surf boat. They had a dangerous voyage through breakers to the schooner, and it was 10 o'clock before the brave life-savers were able to get under the lee of the wreck, which was being swept by huge seas, and rescue the crew.

The shipwrecked sailors spent the night at the life saving station, and early to-day, when the sea was running lower, went out to the wreck with their rescuers and found the schooner was breaking up. The paving stones which were her cargo had pounded through her sides. All saved form the ill-fated craft were deck fittings which the crew were able to tow ashore.

Captain Atwood blames the tide for the disaster. He said:

"I was running down the Cape in a light wind and with the sea smooth in deep water. It must have been the tide which set us on the bar. It was running very strong, and the wind was so light we could not work the vessel off shore."

The Mary L. Crosby was built in 1880 in Millbridge, Me., and was 487 tons gross burden. It is believed that the wreck will be broken up when before nightfall. She went aground in a death trap for ships. But one of the many which have struck bottom there ever got off.

HAS PRIVATE ROOM IN JAIL

PROVIDENCE, May 23.—Thomas D. Taylor, the Boston banker, will in all probability pass the entire Summer in jail at Cranston for want of $350,000 bail. The only possibility of Taylor being released before Fall is that some compromise may be effected between counsel with respect to the amount of bail.

His friends say he appears to be contented at Cranston. He has a walk daily on the country roads, now fragrant with the perfume of wild flowers, and he has a private table of tempting viands in a private room.

GRANITE MEN AGREE TO GO BACK TO WORK

QUINCY, May 23.—The strike of the granite cutters, affecting 980 men, which has been on since a week ago yesterday, has been settled in Boston and the men will probably return to work Monday.

The men struck on the refusal of the manufacturers to sign the new bill as agreed to by the joint National Executive Committee.

The manufacturers refused to sign because of one article of the bill which the manufacturers contended took from the Manufacturers' Association the right to discipline its own members without the consent of the union.

The effect of this clause, the manufacturers claimed, practically meant a closed shop which, they held, was illegal.

At a final meeting between the executive committee of the national association and union a new article was drafted in place of the one objected to. This new article allows both organizations to discipline its own members without interference from the other.

It is expected that the new bill will be signed to-day.

VANDERBILT TO GIVE WIFE $5,000,000

NEW YORK, May 23.—It was learned to-day that the actual cash settlement in the A. G. Vanderbilt divorce case was $5,000,000. That amount was given to Mrs. Vanderbilt practically in trust for her son.

The arrangement was made out of court and before the proceedings for divorce had been begun. The papers in the case, therefore, do not contain any mention of any payment of alimony by the husband.

It was said Mrs. Vanderbilt originally demanded $10,000,000 and that her husband thought that $1,500,000 was enough for him, in these hard times to pay. Eventually a compromise on $5,000,000 was reached.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, it is said, did not require the money for herself, as her personal fortune is sufficient for her needs. She wanted to see that her son was properly provided for in the event of her husband marrying again or in any way losing or impairing his fortune.

Here Is a Very Good Mule Poem

It Is Respectfully Dedicated to All the Non-Thinking Mules of the Democratic and Republican Parties

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Mr. H. V. Hetzel, of the Johnstown Pennsylvania Democrat, is congratulated on the humor, philosophy and common sense which he put into his fourteen verses about the benevolent German grocer gentleman and the mule that he "PROTECTED."

The BOSTON AMERICAN takes the liberty of dedicating these verses to workingmen contented simply with a full dinner pail and a full stomach, part of the year; and to the little business man contented with about half a chance, and about one-quarter of what he ought to get; and to the farmer, the great national worker, working all the year round for the railroad, and often grateful to the railroad for leaving him just enough to eat; and especially to that vast army of old party mules—millions of them—tied up to the Democratic or the Republican party, grateful to be owned by a party in return for just such conditions as fill with gratitude the heart of this mule.

Please read the poem carefully; it is worth it. It is an extremely good, humorous picture of modern political and industrial life in the United States.

The Dissatisfied Mule

By H. V. Hetzel, in Johnstown (Pa.) Democrat

I haf a mule mit great big ears,
He lives to me next door,
For dere I haf a stable built
Against my grocery store.

I gif him oats, I gif him corn,
Und all vat mules can eat;
I haf a blanket for his back,
Und shoes brotect his feet.

His saddle fits him all around,
Like paper on de wall,
I take it off venefer he eats
Inside his whitewashed stall.

His bed is made of stubble straw,
So in Winter he don't freeze;
In Summer he looks the window oud
Und enchoys the efening breeze.

I brotect him tight, mit lock and key,
De door he cannot pass;
If I did not, dot foolish mule
Would get oud on the grass.

He works from morning till in night,
I do not let him stop;
So long dot he behaves dis way,
He never lose his chob.

I didn't hear him grumble once,
He minds me as I like;
"Brotection" makes him satisfied,
He doesn't want to "strike."

Vot for do I brotect dot mule,
Und gif him dings vot's goot?
Vy stroke his ears and pat his head,
Vich looks like gratitoot?

I tell you vy, if you keep still,
Und don't say it oud of school,
I gif "brotection" efery time,
Because I ride dot mule.

It was so in de Faderland,
I find it yet dis day,
He who brotects, gits hold de reins,
Und makes de mule obey.

My mule is like some workingman
Who gets a chob to pull,
Or has a saddle on his back,
So his "dinner" pail gits full.

Who votes de ticket efery time,
Whose heart is full of charity
For all the loafers riding him,
Who brag of "our Brosperity."

If my old mule had half de sense
Vot workmen dink dey've got,
He'd lift his legs und take good aim,
Und kick my dam brains out.

"Vy don't he kick?" some people say,
"Und get oud on the grass?"
My mule don't know to help himself,
His fader was an Ass.

You can't blame a mule, whose "fader was an ass," for lying down contentedly on his straw, allowing himself to be driven, clubbed when need be, by the intelligent grocer who owns him.

But you CAN blame the American citizen, descendant of energetic intelligence, REVOLUTIONARY men, for allowing themselves to be ridden and kicked and driven by that big, national grocer we call the Trusts.

Learning to SPEAK English

It Is Not Easy to Overcome Mistakes Bred in the Brain Through Childhood, Environment Is Powerful

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Mr. Maurice Brill sends in a letter of suggestion as follows:

> In reading your editorial "How to Improve Your Way of Talking," it seemed to me that it might be a splendid idea for you to take up a few more of the bad habits of the English-speaking public.
>
> Mistakes are frequently made, even by college-bred men and women, who, you would think, would know better. I frequently near people use the expression "He don't think so," "I seen it," "It ain't so." It might be a good idea for you to improve the English of your readers by giving them examples of the right and wrong way. I feel that your readers will feel very grateful for this knowledge.

We print Mr. Brill's letter now, as A FIRST LESSON in correct English. We should like to plan such an educational department as he suggests.

But that would lead too far, and it would be almost impossible to decide just what KIND of education would do people the most good.

It would be well undoubtedly if all of us could use fairly accurate English. But, fortunately, we can be useful men, good men, AS GOOD AS EVER LIVED, and still say "I seen it," or "I done it," or "He don't think so."

It is not an easy thing to overcome in a few lessons, or in one hundred lessons, the habits of a lifetime. There was one man very well known in New York City. He was an able citizen, lacking in early education. His wife, well educated, determined to cure him of saying "I done it." And she did cure him. But the poor man now uses sentences of this kind, "Neither have I DID it."

As a burnt child dreads the fire, this unhappy man has been taught to dread the past participle "done." And he is not as well off as before his education began.

Many people use "me" instead of "I," and "I" instead of "me." We might tell them that they can cure themselevs of this, automatically, by putting the "me" or the "I" first. For instance, thousands of ambitious Americans struggling to speak correctly say "Between you and I." If they put the word "you" last they never for a moment would say "Between I and you." Their ear would make them say "Between me and you," and they might get over THAT mistake.

But in a world full of trusts, and criminals, and extortion, and high prices, and not enough work, and too much careless work, and all the rest of it, we feel that so many things excel in importance the incorrect use of "me," "her," "done," "don't," "seen," etc., that the language class will have to wait.

Little Editorials from the People

A PLEA FOR FAIR PLAY

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

In your paper I have read with much satisfaction an article by Mr. Julian Hawthorne in which he so sportsmanlike defends a principle that has been and is being trampled on by would-be sports and professional athletes. That principal is "fair play" in all sports and among contesting athletes. Let me ask a question: Is the love for money or the fear of defeat so inoculated in the American athlete that he has lowered himself to that degree wherein he must be classified with hoodlums and degenerated specimens of humanity? Let us hope not. L. W. M.

Trust and Service

"What Is the Loving Thing to Do?" the motto of a new society called "The Fellowship"

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

MR. BENJAMIN FAY MILLS founded some three years ago a society known as "The Fellowship," in Los Angeles, Cal. It takes the place of a church with a creed, and it embraces all the good of all the creeds of all the churches in its practical philosophy of right-living.

Mr. Mills is now establishing branches of this society all over the country.

"The Fellowship" is an association for the encouragement of trustful and unselfish living.

It regards this as a fundamental and comprehensive statement of religion without superstition, which should make all skepticism absurd. Its inspiration is the insight into the truth of the unity of life and the possibility of the intelligent, practical expression of this truth.

This insight reveals every being, object, atom, event and experience as a demonstration of the Supreme Power—that is, goodness, wisdom and love. It perceives all manifested life as a perfect plan, fulfilling by trustworthy processes a transcendent purpose.

The motive and energy of "The Fellowship" are found in the determination and endeavor to live in voluntary connection with the purpose of life, by the manifestation of unswerving trust toward occurrences, circumstances, other men and women and our own higher nature.

The practical idea of the members is to apply the principles of trust and unselfishness in every individual activity and to every association—domestic, social, educational, economic, political and international.

The creed of "The Fellowship" is "Trust and Service." Its motto is, "What is the loving thing to do?"

Part of Divine Plan

MR. MILLS has asked me to write a few words on what my idea is of "Trust and Service," and to explain how I construe the motto, "What is the loving thing to do?"

My idea of trust is as illimitable as the word indicates. Whatever happens, to believe it is a part of the divine plan. However unpleasant, however painful, however disagreeable may be that happening or circumstance, to determine upon finding its good meaning, and to turn it to the soul's account and make it a means of character building.

Trust does not, in my interpretation of the word, include placid acceptance of conditions or events. It means using these things as stepping stones to deliverance.

When our environment is not to our liking, when we are annoyed and hurt by events, the first thing to do is to discover if we ourselves have not been the cause of these troubles. If we realize on careful analysis that we are the cause, then trust the divine forces to show us the way out.

If we find we are blameless, and the troubles come through what we call Fate, then again trust in divine power, within ourselves and beyond ourselves, to deliver us.

Meanwhile, to go upon our way doing the duty which lies nearest, with absolute trust in the heart that we are treading the path to power.

Trust must include cheerfulness, and it must preclude complaint, spoken or thought. It creates gratitude to the giver—for whatever comes.

Service, in the creed of "The Fellowship," to my interpretation, means continual thought for others—the hourly application of the Golden Rule and the New Commandment; not the Sunday remembrance of them.

Service, through humanity, to God—beginning in the morning, in the home, the boarding house or the hotel, on the ship or on the train, on the street, in public conveyances or in the shop, market place or factory, and extending into the social circles, and always back into the home.

True service to humanity need not consist in giving endowments to churches or colleges, or in building libraries and hospitals. These things are good in their place, and they are good uses for money; but the service most important to the world in bettering humanity is the daily service of one human being toward another.

Sometimes this service takes only the form of a word spoken at the right time; a letter written at the right moment; a call made or an invitation given, which proves remembrance and regard.

Sometimes it means the use of time, and again the use of money, and again the denial to give money, and the enlightenment to give counsel. And always it means an understanding of "what is the loving thing to do?"

Simple as these manifestations of service sound, they are most difficult to perform all the days of all the years. Set forth and undertake to live a life of Trust and Service just one week, and to always do the loving thing, and you will appreciate the universal nature of this creed of Fellowship.

Give It a Trial

TRY it and see what you think of it. But in the trying be honest with yourself. Watch your words, your thoughts and your actions. Do nothing for the praise of men. Do only what your own best self knows to be right and best.

Never mind the times you fall back, and make mistakes, and fail. Each recognition of your own errors means new strength to go forward.

When you make the motto of Fellowship your mental mentor, and listen to the question, "What is the loving thing to do?" spoken by your heart at every turn, you will be surprised to find how difficult is the answer.

Some time the loving thing to do necessitates inflicting pain on those you love. It means warning them when they are on the dowward path; and it means refusing to proceed with them if they will not listen to counsel.

It means to give material aid, and to deny yourself for others; and again it means to withhold material aid and compel the indolent unfortunate to earn his own bread.

It means controlling the quick temper and developing the spirit of tolerance and sympathy. But it means, too, controlling the sympathies and not allowing them to lead you to the performance of another's duties.

There is no more unloving thing than to take another's work and let that one go free of his own responsibility.

A large contract, indeed, is this, to set forth with the resolve to do the loving thing always and everywhere.

Try it!

Begin in your home. Apply the motto to your household, to your treatment of your family, wife, husband, children, parents, servants.

Write out the question and hang it over your mantel or sideboard, where all may see and answer it to their own satisfaction:

"What is the loving thing to do?"
